

THE WORLD as far as known to the ANCIENTS. Frontispiece

T. Kitchen Sculp.

A VIEW OF THE EARTH,

AS FAR AS IT WAS KNOWN TO THE
A N C I E N T S.

BEING A SHORT BUT COMPREHENSIVE
S Y S T E M
O F
CLASSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

EXHIBITING

I. A Description of the several Empires, Kingdoms, and Provinces, their Cities, Towns, Rivers, and Mountains, mentioned in the Greek and Latin Classics, Homer, Virgil, Xenophon, Cæsar, Livy, Herodotus, &c.

II. An accurate Abridgment of the whole Æneid of Virgil, and Odyssey of Homer, in a geographical Description of the Voyages of Æneas and Ulysses. With the Travels and Voyages of Saint Paul.

Being a Work absolutely necessary for the right understanding of the Classics.

ADAPTED TO THE USE OF SCHOOLS AND ACADEMIES.

Illustrated with a new Set of Maps, corrected from the best Ancient Historians and Geographers, on Purpose for this Work.

By R. T U R N E R, Junior,
OF MAGDALEN HALL, OXFORD,

AND AUTHOR OF THE HERETICAL HISTORY.

L O N D O N:
Printed for J. D O D S L E Y, in Pall-Mall.

M. DCC. LXXIX.

T O
FRANCIS NORTH, Esq;

ELDEST SON OF
THE RIGHT REVEREND
THE
LORD BISHOP OF WORCESTER,

THE FOLLOWING SHEETS, DESIGNED TO FACILITATE TO YOUNG MINDS THE ACQUISITION OF CLASSICAL LEARNING, ARE DEDICATED AND DEVOTED,

B Y,

S I R!

YOUR MOST OBEDIENT

HUMBLE SERVANT,

LONDON,
Nov. 12, 1778.

R. TURNER, Jun.

CONTENTS

PART I.

INTRODUCTION.

| Sect. | Page | Sect. | Page |
|--------------------------------|------|--|------|
| I. The Antiquity of Geography, | 1 | Division of the Earth, - | 3 |
| II. The Figure of the Earth, - | 2 | IV. The Earth in general, so far as known to the Ancients, - | 6 |
| III. The Peopling and | | | |

CHAP. I.

Of EUROPE.

| Sect. | Page | Sect. | Page |
|------------------------------------|-------|--|------|
| I. Ancient Europe in general, - | 8 | XI. Italia, - | 18 |
| II. Iberia, including Lusitania, - | ibid. | XII. Germania, - | 20 |
| III. Gallia or Gaul, - | 10 | XIII. Pannonia, - | 21 |
| IV. Britannia, - | 12 | XIV. Sarmatia Europæa, - | 22 |
| V. Ireland, - | 13 | XV. The Islands in the Mediterranean, - | 23 |
| VI. Dacia, - | 14 | XVI. The Islands of the Propontis, &c. &c. - | 24 |
| VII. Mœsia, - | ibid. | | |
| VIII. Illyricum, - | 15 | | |
| IX. Thracia, - | ibid. | | |
| X. Græcia, - | 16 | | |

CHAP. II.

Of ASIA.

| Sect. | Page | Sect. | Page |
|-------------------------------|------|-------------------------------|-------|
| I. Ancient Asia in general, - | 27 | III. Babylonia or Chaldaea, - | 29 |
| II. Syria, - | 28 | IV. Bithynia, - | ibid. |
| | | Sect. V. | |

C O N T E N T S.

| Sect. | Page | Sect. | Page |
|--------------------|-------|------------------------|------|
| V. Persia, - - | 30 | XII. Arabia, - | 35 |
| VI. Media, - | 31 | XIII. Palæstina or the | |
| VII. Assyria, - | ibid. | Holy Land, 36 | |
| VIII. Phœnice, - | 32 | XIV. Scythia and Sar- | |
| IX. Cappadocia and | | matia, - | 38 |
| Pontus, - | 33 | XV. India, - - | 39 |
| X. Armenia, - | ibid. | XVI. Scrica, - | 40 |
| XI. Asia Minor, or | | XVII. The country of | |
| Asia properly so | | the Sinæ, ibid. | |
| called, - - | 34 | | |

C H A P. III.

Of A F R I C A.

| Sect. | Page | Sect. | Page |
|-----------------------|------|-------------------------|------|
| I. Ancient Africa in | | VI. Marmarica, | 45 |
| general, - | 41 | VII. Cyrenaica, ibid. | |
| II. Egypt, - - | 42 | VIII. Regio Syrtica, 46 | |
| III. Numidia, - | 44 | IX. Africa Propria, | |
| IV. Mauritania, ibid. | | ibid. | |
| V. Gætulia, - | 45 | X. Ethiopia, - | 47 |

P A R T II.

| | |
|---------------------------|---------------------------|
| The Voyage of Æneas | The Travels and Voy- |
| from Troy to Italy, P. 51 | ages of Saint Paul, P. 91 |
| The Voyage of Ulysses | The Voyage of Saint Paul |
| from Troy to Ithaca, | from Cefarea to Rome, |
| 75 | 97 |

A SHORT

A
S H O R T S Y S T E M
O F
C L A S S I C A L G E O G R A P H Y.

P A R T I.

T H E Author flatters himself, that the following short Compendium exhibits every Thing necessary to enable the young Student to proceed to the larger Systems of Geography with Ease and Pleasure ; such as those compiled by PTOLEMY, PLINY, STRABO, DIONYSIUS PERIEGETES, MELA, BRIETIUS, CLUVERIUS, &c. &c.

A
S H O R T S Y S T E M
O F
C L A S S I C A L G E O G R A P H Y.

P A R T I.

I N T R O D U C T I O N.

S E C T I O N I.

The Antiquity of GEOGRAPHY.

THE study of Geography appears to have been diligently cultivated in the earlier ages of the world. The ancient Egyptian priests, the Babylonians and Chaldeans, not only taught it, but transmitted it to posterity, wrapped up in hieroglyphics, symbols, enigmas, and fables.

Homer is supposed to have first introduced this science into Greece *. In his poems he has given us an exact description of that country, mentioned particularly its cities, mountains, and plains, and traced out the courses of its rivers, with Asia Minor, and the nations bordering on the Hellespont.

* Strabo.

2 INTRODUCTION.

The first among the ancient Philosophers who attempted to delineate the earth in the form of a map, was Anaximander *, the successor of Thales, the celebrated founder of the Ionic School: and Socrates is said to have shewn to his scholar Alcibiades, a chart or map, on which was drawn the earth, divided into land and water. Varro tells us, that the Romans had hung up in the temples of Tellus, tables or maps of the earth.

This is a sufficient proof of the great industry of the Ancients, in cultivating this most useful science; without which the intercourse of nations with each other, and the various revolutions in states by wars, conquests, and migrations, would be obscure and unintelligible.

SECTION II.

The Figure of the EARTH.

WILD and extravagant were the notions the Ancients had with regard to the Figure of the earth.

Those of the earliest times supposed it to be one large extensive plane; the Heavens above it, in which the sun, moon, and stars appeared to move daily from east to west, they conceived to be at no great distance from it; and Hell as spread out at an equal depth all under the surface of it †: others, as absurdly, taught that it was concave; some, again, that it was oblong, or a parallelogram; and others, that it was quadrangular.

The form of a semi-circle we find ascribed to it by Crates; and that of a round table by Hipparchus.

* Γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης περιμήτρει πρῶτος ἔργαψεν. Diog. Laertius.

† Hence they had passages that were supposed to lead directly to Hell, in every country; as the lakes of Avernus and Amsancus for Italy. “It is indifferent to me (says Anaxagoras) where you bury me, for my journey to the other world will be just the same.”

The form of a sling was given to it by Posidonius; and Leucippus resembled it to a drum.

Such were the idle dreams of the old philosophers; which were in time confuted by the assistance of mathematical learning, and the experience of travellers, navigators, and astronomers; by which the spherical figure of the earth has invincibly been demonstrated *.

S E C T I O N III.

The Peopling and Division of the EARTH.

TH E earth was once in a confused and desolate state; but by divine Providence, in the space of six days, reduced into an habitable world: cloathed with trees, shrubs, plants, and flowers, and stocked with various kinds of animals.

Sixteen hundred and fifty-six years after the earth was made and inhabited, it was overflowed and destroyed by a deluge of water; so that a general destruction and devastation was brought upon the earth and all things in it, mankind, and every living animal; excepting Noah and his family, who, by a special care of God, were preserved in a certain ark or vessel, with such kinds of living creatures as he took in with him.

After these waters had raged for some time on the earth, they began to lessen and shrink; they retired by degrees into their proper channels and caverns within the earth; and the mountains and fields began to appear, and the whole habitable earth in that form and shape we now see it.

Thus perished the old world, and the present arose from the ruins and remains of it!

Noah, when he came forth of the ark, settled in Mesopotamia, and before his death, divided the world among his three sons; giving to Shem, Asia; to Ham, Africa; and to Japhet, Europe.

* See this explained and delineated in Turner's Modern Geography, p. 2.

The descendants of Shem settled from Media westward to the sea-coast of Aram or Syria. His sons were Elam, Ashur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram.

I. ELAM possessed the country now called Persia. From him it had the names of Elymæ and Elymais.

II. ASHUR settled on the west or north-west of Elam in Assyria, called likewise after him Ashur, at present Cardestan.

III. ARPHAXAD peopled Chaldea.

IV. LUD is supposed to have wandered as far as Lydia.

V. ARAM and his descendants inhabited Armenia, Mesopotamia, and Syria. From his son Uz, a tract about Damascus, the Stony and Desert Arabia, was called the Land of Uz.

The second son of Noah, HAM, removed into Egypt, which, in Scripture, is often called the Land of Ham. The sons of Ham were CUSH, MIZRAIM, CANAAN, and PHUT.

I. CUSH, his eldest son, possessed Arabia.

II. MIZRAIM and his descendants inhabited Ethiopia, Lybia, Egypt, and the neighbouring countries.

III. CANAAN and his posterity settled in Phœnicia, and the Land of Canaan, lying on the east and south-east of the Mediterranean sea. This was the land afterwards promised to Abraham, which he and his posterity accordingly enjoyed, and was then the Land of Israel and Judab.

IV. PHUT, the youngest son of Ham, planted himself in the western parts of Africa, on the Mediterranean, in the country of Mauritania, whence this country was called the Region of Phut, in St. Jerome's time.

The Scripture leaves us very much in the dark, as to the country where Japhet, the eldest son of Noah, settled. All we can collect upon this occasion is, that he retired with his descendants to the north of the countries planted by the children of

Sect. 3. The Peopling, &c. the EARTH. 5

Shem. His sons were GOMER, MAGOG, MADAI, JAVAN, TUBAL, MESHECH, and TIRAS.

I. GOMER, the eldest son of Japhet, was the father of the Gomerites, called by the Greeks, Galatians; who were the Gauls of Asia Minor, inhabiting part of Phrygia.

The families of Gomer soon grew very numerous, and sent divers colonies into several parts of Europe. They first settled at the lake Mæotis, and so gave the name of Bosphorus Cimmerius to the streight between it and the Euxine sea. These, in time, spreading by new colonies, along the Danube, settled in the country called from thence Germany, whose ancient inhabitants were the Cimbri, so called of the Cimmerians. From Germany, they afterwards spread themselves into Gaul, where they were originally called Gomerites, then by the Greeks Galatæ, and at last Gauls.

From the colonies of Gaul or Germany, came the first inhabitants of this our isle of GREAT BRITAIN.

II. MAGOG, the second son of Japhet, was the father of the Scythians; from whose descendants, migrating over Caucasus, it is supposed the Russians and Moscovites sprung.

III. MADAI, it is generally agreed, planted Media, and the Medes are called by his name in Scripture.

IV. JAVAN settled in the south-west part of Asia Minor, about Ionia. He had four children, ELISHA, TARSHISH, KITTIM, and DODANIM.

1. ELISHA peopled the most considerable isles between Europe and Asia; for they are called in Scripture the Isles of Elisha; and the sea itself might be called Hellespont, as if it were Elishpont, or sea of Elisha.

The descendants of Elisha passing over into Europe, were called Hellenes, and their country Hellas, and afterwards Greece.

2. TARSHISH gave name to Tarsus, and all Cilicia, of which it was the capital. It seems also to have been the Tarshish to which Jonas thought to flee from the presence of the Lord.

B 3

3. KITTIM

3. KITTIM peopled Macedonia, called in Scripture the Land of Chettim. His posterity migrated into Cyprus and Italy.

4. DODANIM sent colonies into Rhodes.

5. & 6. TUBAL and MESHECH planted the country lying contiguous to Mageg.

7. TIRAS led his colony into Thrace.

These are the plantations of the sons of Noah; and after this manner were the nations divided in the earth after the flood, and dispersion of mankind.

By this account, it does not appear that they migrated eastward beyond Media, northward beyond the mountains of Caucasus, southward beyond Ethiopia or Habashia, or westward beyond a part of Lybia and Greece, including Macedonia; though it is most probable, the more distant parts were not planted immediately by these first colonies, but by their posterity afterwards.

SECTION IV.

The EARTH in general, so far as known to the Ancients.

THE knowledge the Ancients had of the Earth was very confused!—All they knew of it lay within a line supposed to be drawn from the island Thule, or the modern Iceland, eastward through the middle of Norway and Sweden, round Scythia, including India; and from thence passing round the island Argyre, now denominated Sumatra, to the island of the Hannoni, or Menuthias, the modern Madagascar; then passing up within the eastern coast of Africa, excluding Ethiopia, with all the middle and lower parts of Africa, which are south of mount Atlas, taking in only Egypt, the coast of Barbary, Mauritania, and Guinea; crossing the Equinoctial, and passing upwards again, round the Fortunate or

Sect. 4. The EARTH in general. 7 or Canary Islands, through the Atlantic, to Thule again *.

The Earth, thus circumscribed, received many divisions; but the most common one, and which was generally received by all, was into three parts, EUROPE, ASIA, and AFRICA.

These parts, taken together, the Heathen writers termed the WORLD; a succinct account of which, including the most remarkable cities, towns, rivers, mountains, promontories, and bays, cannot but be a valuable present to the young classical scholar.

* See map of the world at the beginning of the book.

C H A P T E R I.

Of EUROPE.

SECTION I.

Ancient EUROPE in general.

EUROPE derived its name, according to the old historians and geographers, from EUROPA, the daughter of Egeus, king of the Phœnicians, who was stolen by Jupiter, transformed into a bull; that is, in a ship named the Bull, or bearing the figure of a bull in her stern; and carried into Crete.

Its ancient boundaries were, on the south, the Mediterranean sea; on the west, the western or Atlantic ocean; and, on the east, by the Mare Ægeum, the Hellespont, Propontis, the Thracian Bosphorus, and the Euxine sea; but on the north its boundary was unknown to the Ancients.

This tract of land, thus extended, was about 24,000 stadia, or 30,000 English miles in length, and 14,000 stadia, or 1750 miles in breadth.

EUROPE was divided by the Ancients into west, south, and north.

The western parts contained the countries of Iberia or Spain, including Lusitania or Portugal, and Gaul, with the British Islands.

The southern parts contained Dacia, Illyricum, Græcia, and Italia.

The northern parts contained Germania, Sarmatia, and Scandinavia or Scandai.

SECTION II.

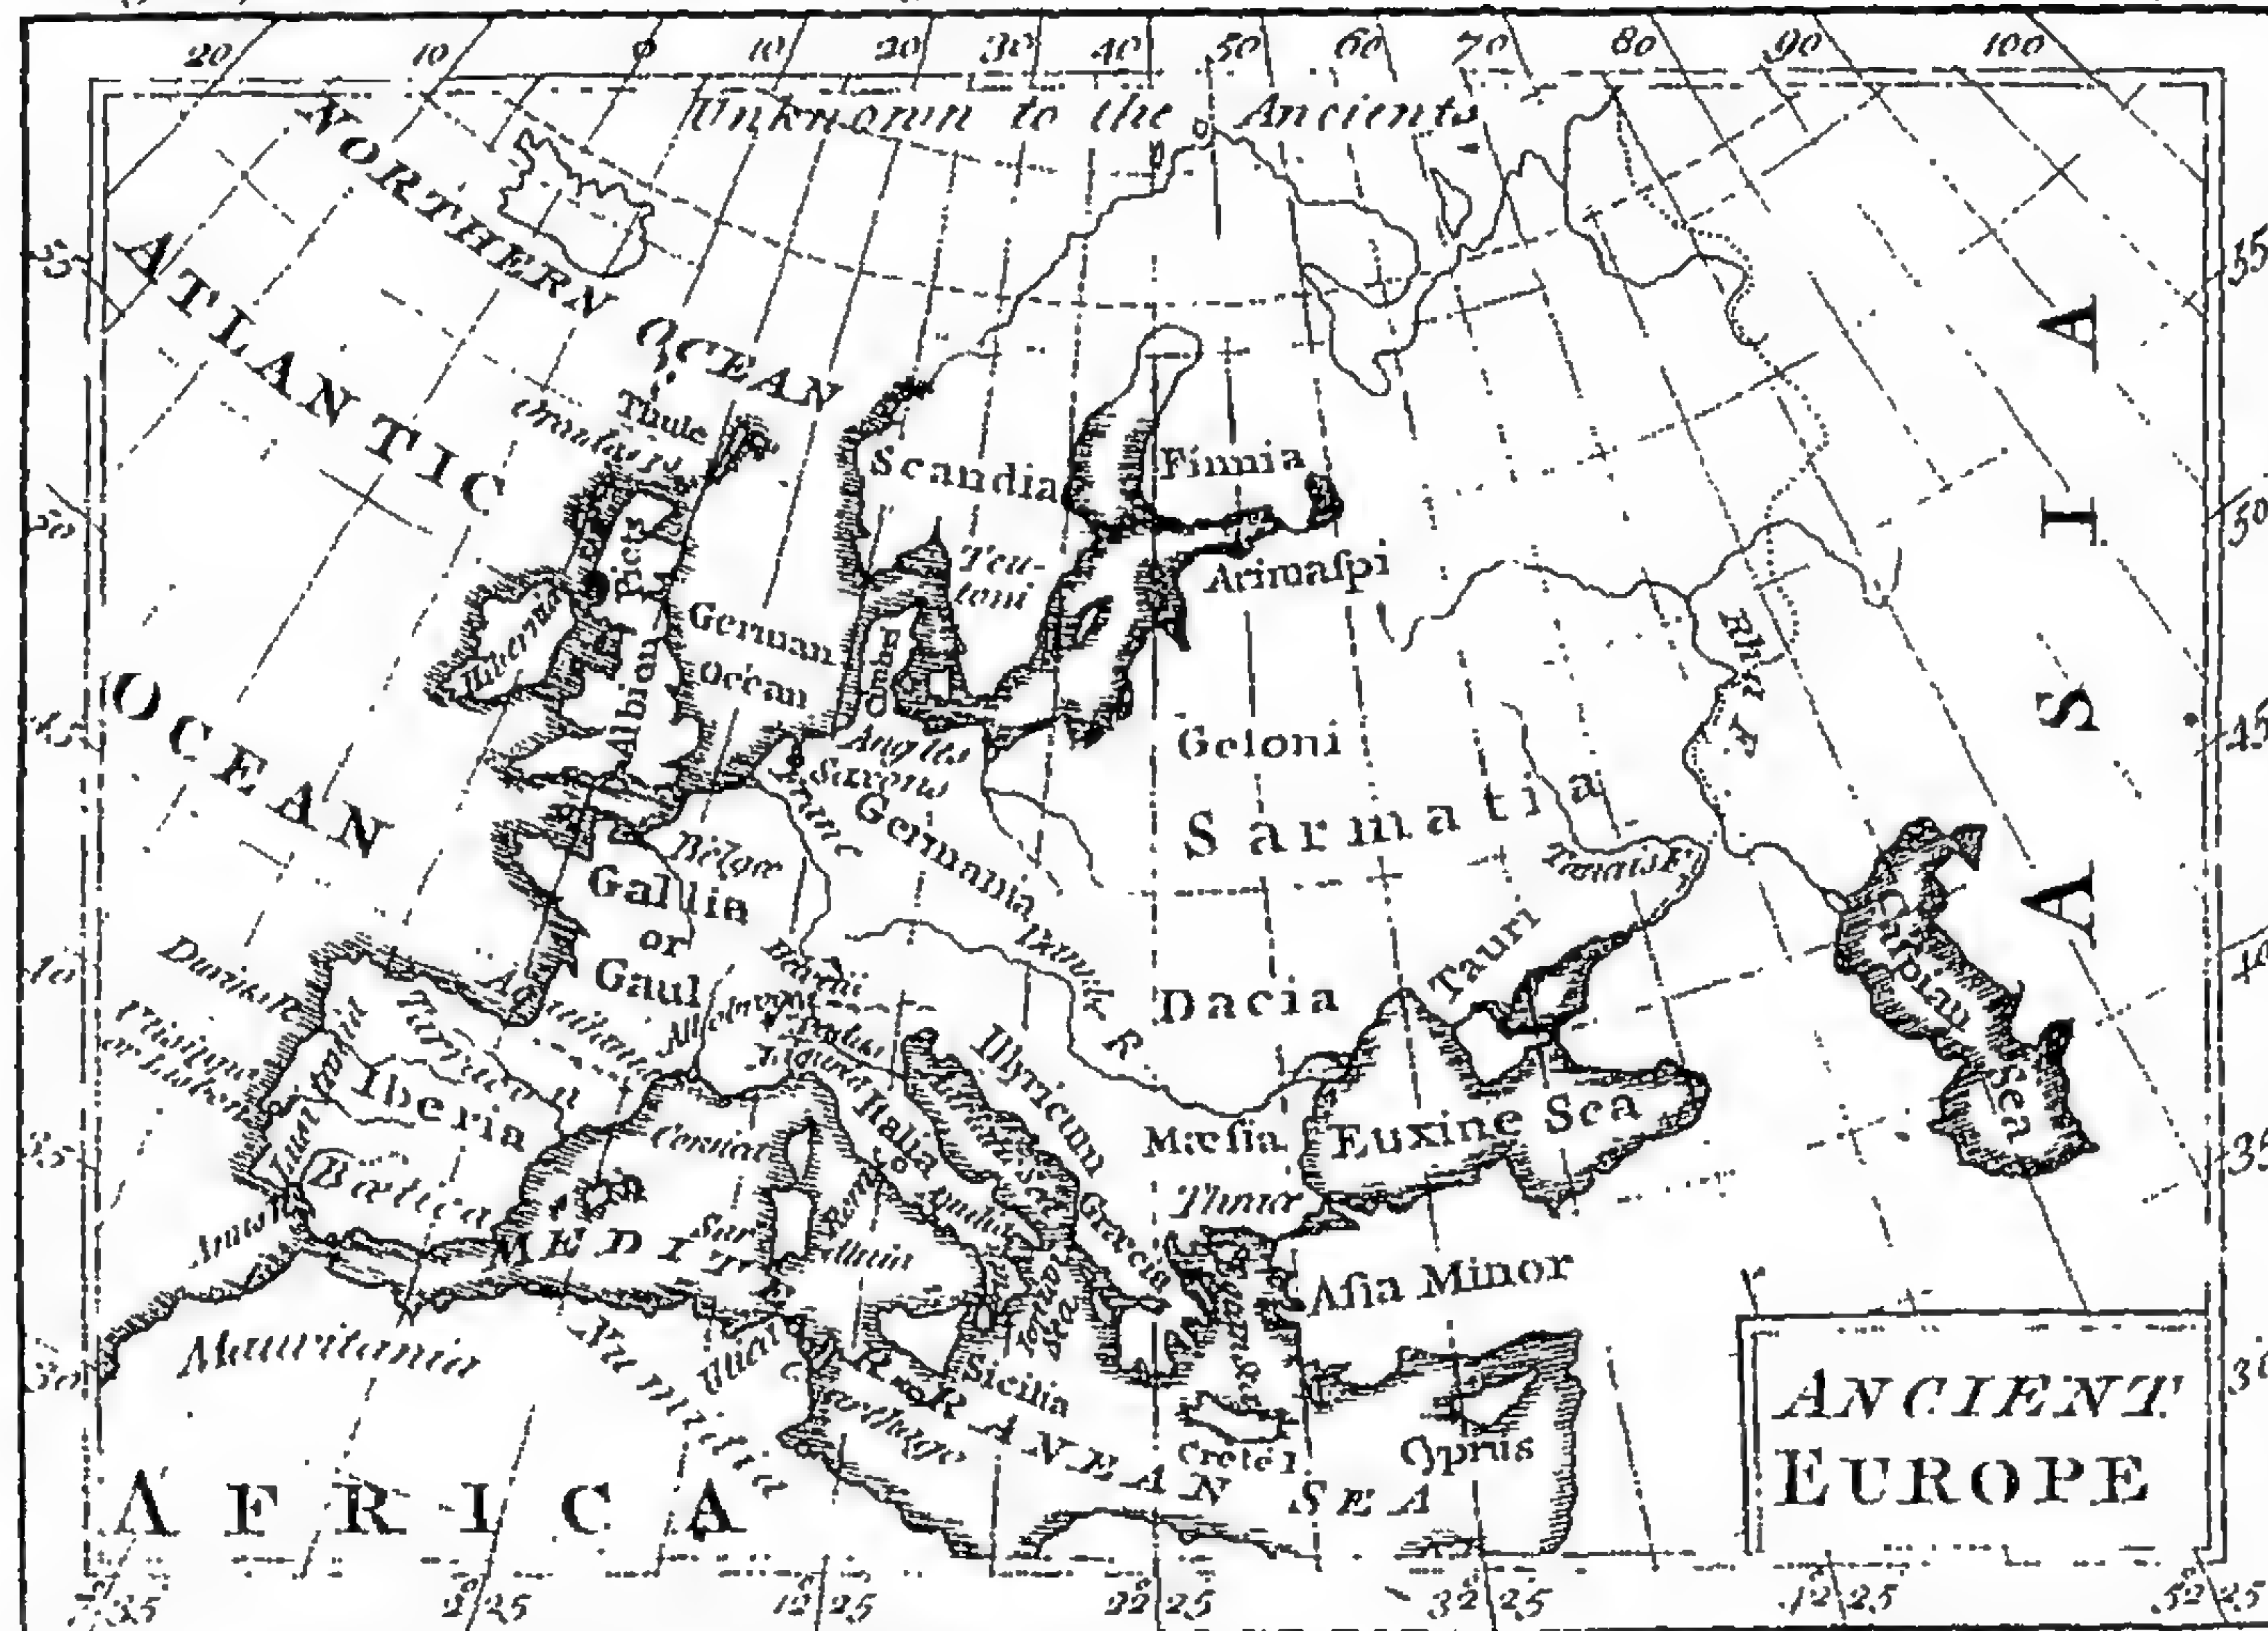

IBERIA, including LUSITANIA.

THE ancient geographers gave the name of Ἰβηρία, Iberia, to that tract of land now called Spain and Portugal, from a colony of Iberians, a people bordering

Long. W. from Ferro

Long. E.

Page 8

Long. W.

Long. E. from London

Thalesian Sea "Scythia"

SECT. 2. IBERIA, including LUSITANIA. 9

dering upon mount Caucasus, planted there. It was called also Hispania, from Hispan, the son of Hercules, and Hesperia ultima, because it was the westernmost part of Europe.

IBERIA was separated from Gaul by the Pyrenean mountains on the north; on the other sides it was bounded by the Mediterranean; the Sinus Gaditanus, or bay of Gades; the Fretum Herculeum, or streights of Gibraltar; the western ocean, and the sea of Cantabria.

It was divided into Hispania Citerior and Ulterior, by the river Iberus in Andalusia; and afterwards into PROVINCIA TARRACONENSIS, BAETICA, and LUSITANIA. This latter division was made by Scipio.

I. PROVINCIA TARRACONENSIS, so called from Taracco, its principal city, was limited on the east by the Mediterranean, on the west by the ocean, and on the north by the Cantabrian sea, and the J.. It contained the modern Old Castile, Arragon, Catalonia, and Valentia.

The most remarkable cities of this Province were PAMPELO, TARACCO the metropolis, VALENTIA, COMPLUTUM, MANTUA, and SEGOBRIGA. This Province was famous for its delicate wines *.

II. PROVINCIA BAETICA, so called from the river Baetis dividing it in the middle, was bounded on the south by the Mediterranean and the Sinus Gaditanus or gulph of Gades, and on the north by the Cantabric sea, now the Bay of Biscay.

Cities of most note in Baetica were, the famed city HIPSAL, now Seville; CORDUBA and GADES or GADIR, now Cadiz.

III. LUSITANIA, the modern Portugal, was bounded by the Anas on the south; and the Durius, now the Douro, on the north.

Chief Towns were OLYSIPPO, now Lisbon, and AUGUSTA EMERITA. The people were called Lusitani.

• Martial.

The

The most celebrated rivers in Iberia were, the Iberus, now Ebro; the ANAS, now Guadiana; the TAGUS, now Tajo; the BAETIS, now the Guadalquivir; and the DURIUS, now Douro.

SECTION III.

GALLIA or Gaul.

GAUL was that part of Europe that lay within the boundaries of the Alps, and Pyrenean mountains, from east to west; the Mediterranean on the south; and the Rhine and British ocean on the north and north-east.

This tract of land, called by the Romans Gallia, and by the Greeks Galatia, was divided into four nations; namely, BELGÆ, AQUITANS, CELTES or Gauls, and GALLIA NARBONENSIS. This quadripartite division was made by Augustus Cæsar.

I. The BELGÆ inhabited that part called Gallia Belgica, extending from the British sea to the Seine.

The principal towns of Belgica were, ANDOMATUNUM, now Langres, the metropolis; MOGUNTIA-CUM, now Mentz; AUGUSTA-TREVIRORUM, now Triers; DIVODURUM, now Metz; TULLIUM, now Toul; NEMETACUM, now Arras; and CÆSAROMAGUS, now Beauvais.

II. GALLIA AQUITANICA lay between Gallia Narbonensis, the Pyrenees, the Ocean, and the river Ligeris, by which it was separated from Gallia Celtica.

Remarkable cities were, AVARICUM, now Bourges; BARDEGALA, now Bordeaux; BAZAS; and ELUSABERRIS, now Aux.

III. GALLIA CELTICA, called also Lugdunensis, was situated between the Ocean and the three rivers Ligeris, Sequana, and Matrona, now the Loire, Seine, and Marne. The two last divided it from Belgica.

Towns of note were, VINDANA, now Vannes; CONDIVINCUM, now Nantz; VIDUNUM, now Mans; GENNABUM, GENNABUM, now Orleans ; CÆSARODUNUM, now Tours ; AGENDICUM, now Sens ; LUGDUNUM, now Lyons ; and their metropolitan city of LUTETIA, now Paris.

IV. GALLIA NARBONENSIS lay on the Mediterranean sea, being bounded by the Alps and the river Varus from Italy ; by the Pyrenean mountains from Spain, and by the river Garumna : mount Gebenna, and the river Rhodanus divides it from Gallia Aquitania and Gallia Celtica.

Chief cities were, GENEVA ; VIENNA ; VALENTIA, now Valence ; AVENIO, now Avignon ; ARAUSIO, now Orange ; ARELATE, now Arles ; MASSILIÆ, now Marseilles ; NARBO, their metropolis, now Narbonne ; TOLOSA, now Toulouse ; and NEMAUSIS, now Nismes.

Rivers of note in Gaul were, the Scaldis, now Schelde or Escaut. The Sequana, Ligeris, and Garumna, now the Seine, Loire, and Garonne. The Rhodanus or Rhofne.

Their principal lake was Lacus Lemanus, now the lake of Geneva.

Mountains were, the Gebenna, now Cevenne ; the Jura, now Jour ; and the Vogesus, now Vauge.

Hence it is evident, that GALLIA BELGICA included all Germany to the west of the Rhine, Alsace, Lorrain, all the Low Countries west of the Rhine, the greatest part of Champagne, and the Isle of France.

GALLIA AQUITANICA contained Guienne, with so much of Orleannois and Lionnois, as lies on the south and west sides of the Loire.

GALLIA CELTICA comprized Bretagne and Normandy, as much of Orleannois as lies north and east of the Loire, as much of the Isle of France and Champagne as lies south of the Seine and Marne, with greatest part of Burgundy Duchy, and some of the government of Lionnois.

GALLIA NARBONENSIS comprehended Languedoc, Provence, Dauphiny, and Savoy.

SECTION

SECTION IV.

BRITANNIA.

THE island now called GREAT BRITAIN*, was, in more ancient times, by way of distinction, stiled ALBION, the name of BRITANNIA being then common to all the islands.

BRITAIN lies opposite the coasts of France and Germany in a triangular form. It is divided from Ireland to the west by the Vergivian, or Irish sea; washed on the north by the Northern ocean; on the east by the German ocean; and on the south by the British channel, called by the Romans Fretum Britannicum.

That part of Britain which comprehends the present kingdom of England and Wales, was in ancient times divided into seventeen petit states; whereof the inhabitants were distinguished by the following names.

THE DANMONII, the DUROTRIGES, the BELGÆ, the ATTRIBATHI, the REGNI, the CANTII, the DOBUNII, the CATTIEUCHALANI, the TRINOBANTES, the ICENI, the CORITANI, the CORNAVII, the SILURES, the DIMETÆ, the ORDOVICES, the BRIGANTES, the OTTADINI.

Britain was divided by the Romans into Britannia Romana and Britannia Barbara; which last appellation they gave to that part of Britain which was not subject to Rome. Britannia Romana was divided into BRITANNIA SUPERIOR, and BRITANNIA INFERIOR, or Upper and Lower Britain. The former reached from the Channel to Chester; the latter extended to the Isthmus between Glota, now called the Clyde, and Bodotria, now called the Firth of Forth, where the

* The old Celtic name is Brettan, signifying a high mountainous country.

Emperor Severus built a wall, parting Britannia Romana from Britannia Barbara.

The chief rivers were the Thamesis, now the Thames; the Sabrina, at present the Severn; and the Abus, now known by the name of the Humber.

S E C T I O N V.

I R E L A N D.

IRELAND is the second in extent among the British Islands, and was known to the Ancients by the names of Iris, Ierne, Juvena, Hibernia, and Britannia Parva.

It lies to the west of Britain, and was inhabited by the following people.

The Rhobogdii, Venicnii, Erdini, Darni, Voluntii, Blani, Cauci, Menapii, Brigantes, Nagnatæ, Auteri, Gangani, Luceni, Velabri, Uterini or Iverni, Vodiæ, and Coriondi.

Rivers of note in this island were, the Senus, now called the Shannon; the Birgus, now the Barrow; and the Bovinda, at present, the Boyne.

The most remarkable of the lesser British isles were the Cassiterides, called also the Hesperides, the Silures, and the Sigdeles, lying over against Promontorium Bo-lerium in Cornwall; they are now called Scilly Isles. *MONA, now Anglesey, on the west, in North Wales. MONA, or Isle of Man, over-against Lancashire; this is the Mona mentioned by Cæsar. The ORCADES, now Orkneys, off the north of Scotland. The SCHET-LAND Isles are still further north; the chief of which is supposed to have been the Thule, or utmost island of the Ancients. VECTIS, or the Isle of Wight, lies on the south of Hampshire.

* The ancient seat of the Druids. TACITUS.

S E C T I O N

SECTION VI.

D A C I A.

THIS tract of land was bounded northward by the Montes Carpatici, now Crapach; eastward by the river Hierasus, now Prut, and the Ister or Danube; southward by the Danube again; westward by the River Patissus or Tibiscus, now the Tbeyffe.

Within this compass is now contained all Transylvania and Wallachia, part of Moldavia, and that part of Upper Hungary that lies east of the River Tbeyffe *.

It was divided into three parts; RIPENSIS, which had the towns Zurobara, and Zeugmac, now Temeswar, and Clausenberg. MEDITERRANEA, where stood the cities Zarmisogetusa or Colonia Ulpia Trajana, Alba Julia, and Patruissa, at present Verbeli, Weissenberg, and Constad. ALPESTRIS, the third part, contained no towns of note.

The division of the people into Daci and Getæ is very ancient: those to the west, towards Germany, being called Daci, and those to the east, or towards the Euxine, were called Getæ.

SECTION VII.

M O E S I A.

MOESIA was bounded on the north by the Danube, which separated it from Dacia; on the east by the Euxine Sea; on the south by Mount Æmus; and on the west by Illyricum and Pannonia.

It was divided into MOESIA SUPERIOR, now called Servia, and MOESIA INFERIOR, now Bulgaria †.

Its inhabitants were the DARDANI, the TRIBALTI, the TROGLODYTÆ, the PEUCESTÆ, and the GETÆ.

Its chief town was Nessus, now Nissa.

This country was joined by the Emperor Trajan to Dacia by an admirable bridge.

* Cellarius.

† Pliny. Ptolemy.

SECTION

SECTION VIII.

ILLYRICUM.

TO the west of Moësia and Macedonia lay ILLYRIS, ILLYRIA, or ILLYRICUM, along the Sinus Adriaticus, up quite to Istria, in Italy; but whose exact limits are left undetermined both by ancient historians and geographers.

It was divided into two parts.

I. LIBURNIA, which contained the towns of Senia, Jadera, and Scardona, now known by the names of Zegna, Zara Vecchia, and Scardona.

II. DALMATIA, where stood the cities of Dulminium, Sicum, Salona, Narona, Epidaurus, Budua, Colchinium, Lissus, and Scodra; at present called Delminio, Sebenico, Spalato, Narenta, Ragusa, Budoa, Dolcigno, and Scutari *.

SECTION IX.

THRACIA.

THIS country lay to the north-east of Greece, being bounded northward by mount Æmus; eastward by the Euxine Sea, the Thracian Bosphorus, and the Hellepont; southward by the mount Ægæum; and westward by the river Styrmon.

Among its people the chief were these; the BISTONES, CICONES, EDONES, ODRYSÆ, THYNI, BEBRYCES, SITHONI, BESSI, DENSELETÆ, MÆDI or MEDI.

Its chief city was BYZANTIUM, afterwards called Nova Roma, and now Constantinople. Other remarkable towns were Ænus, Philippi, Neapolis, Adrianopolis, &c.

The inhabitants were the descendants of Tiras, son of Japhet, and from hence received their name, Thracæ. From their being a warlike people, Mars was said to be born, and to have had his residence among them *.

* Ptolemy. Pliny.

SECTION X.

GRÆCIA.

THE general names by which the Grecians were known by ancient geographers and historians, were those of Gaioi, and Graicoi, from one Græcus, the father of Tbessalus. Those they soon after changed for Ac bæi and Hellenes. Another name by which they were known in several parts of Greece, was that of Pelasgi, from Pelasgus, the founder of the Arcadian kingdom. But the most ancient name of all, is universally allowed to be that of Iones, derived from Ion, the son of Xutbus.

Greece was bounded on the east by the Ægean sea, on the west by the Ionian, on the south by the Cretan, and by Tbrace and Illyrium on the north.

It was divided into five parts, PELOPONNESUS, GRÆCIA PROPRIA OR HELLAS, EPIRUS, THESSALIA, and MACEDONIA, and comprehended the following kingdoms:

In Peloponnesus; the kingdoms of SICYON, ARGOS, MESSENA, CORINTH, ACHAIA PROPRIA, ARCADIA, and LACONIA, of which Lacedæmon or Sparta was the metropolis.

Out of it, or in Græcia propria, those of ATTICA, with its chief city Athenæ, MEGARA, where stood the city Eleusis; BOEOTIA, its capital was Thebes; LOCRI-EPICHNEMIDIA, whose chief town was Amplissa; DORIS, with its capital of the name; PHOCIS, whose most considerable city was Delphi; LOCRI-OZOLÆA, whose capital was Naupactus; and ÆTHOLIA, whose only city of note was Ænias.

* Sophocles, Euripides.

In Epirus; MOLOSSIA, where stood the sacred groves of Dodona; AMPHILOCHI, with its capital Amos Amphilocium; CASSIOPÆI, with the city Cassiope; DRÆOPES; CHAONES, where stood the city Oricum; THRESPOTII, in this country stood the town Buthrotum; ALMENY, whose principal town was Nicopolis; and ACARNANIA, where was the famous promontory of Aëtion*.

In Thessaly†, it contained the countries of the THESSALIOTIS, ESTIOTES, PELASGIOTIS, MAGNESIA, and PHTHIA.

In Macedonia, the TAULANTII, within whose territories stood the cities Epidamnus or Dyrrachium, and Apollonia; the PÆONES, whose chief city was Alorus; ÆMATHIA, Egea or Edessa was the capital; MYGDONIA, with the cities Antigonía, Letæ, and Terpilus; PIERIA‡, with the city Pydna; PARAXIS, in this country stood the city Palena; AMPHAXITIS, where stood Thessalonica and Stagira; EDONIA, with the colonies of Amphipolis and Philippi; and CHALCIDICA, with the towns Angæa, Singus, and Acanthus.

All these have, at one time or other, been severally governed by kings of their own, whose names we find occasionally mentioned in the histories of the more considerable kingdoms of Sicyon, Argos, and Mycene, Attica, Bæotia, Arcadia, Thessaly, Corinth, and Sparta; of the Argonautic expedition, and of the Trojan war.

Greece was remarkable; 1. for the oracle and temple of Dodona, sacred to Jupiter, in Molassia, a province of Epirus. The trees were said to be endowed with human voice; and, therefore, the Argonauts built their ship Argo of them.

2. The river Acheron in Epirus, made by the poets one of the infernal streams.

* Celebrated on account of the victory Augustus gained over Antony and Cleopatra.

† Here were the plains of Pharsalia, where Cæsar routed Pompey.

‡ Famous for its being the region of the Muses, styled from hence Pierides,

C

3. Mount

3. Mount Olympus in Thessaly, celebrated among the poets for its extraordinary height.

4. The delightful valley of Tempe, about six miles in length, and five in breadth, situate between the mountains of Ossa, Pelion, and Olympus, so beautified with nature's gifts, and watered by the river Peneus, which ran through it, that it was reckoned the garden of the Muses.

5. The city of Delphi, in Phocis, famous for the temple and oracle of Apollo.

6. The Pythian games, which were instituted in honour of Apollo at Pythion, a city in Phocis.

7. The Eleusinian mysteries, in honour of Ceres, at Eleusis, a city in Attica.

8. The Nemean games, held in memory of Hercules' killing a lion, in the neighbourhood of Nemea, a city of Peloponnesus.

The province of BOEOTIA was famous for its thick, foggy air, and for the dullness and stupidity of its inhabitants; insomuch that calling a man a Bœotian, was the same as calling him a stupid fellow.—Horace, speaking of a dull, heavy fellow, says, Bœotum jurares, crasso in aere natum.

SECTION XI.

I T A L I A.

ANCIENT Italy was divided from Africa, Greece, the ancient Dalmatia, and Liburnia, by the Tyrrhenian, Ionian, and Adriatic seas; and from Transalpine Gaul and Rætia, by a long ridge of mountains called the Alps.

The country comprized within these boundaries was about 900 miles in length; its breadth, owing to its shape, is very unequal, being, at the foot of the Alps, 550 miles; in the middle parts 136, and in some places scarcely 25.

Its

Its appellation is, according to old geographers, from Itali *, the ancient name for oxen, for which this country was famous; or more probably from Italus, who was at the head of a colony †.

ITALY was, in more ancient times, like most other countries, parcelled out into endless petty kingdoms and states, till, in after-ages, when the Gauls settled in the western, and many Greek colonies in the eastern provinces of this country, it was divided into three great parts, GALLIA, CISALPINA, ITALY properly so called, and MAGNA GRÆCIA.

I. CISALPINE GAUL ‡ was bounded on the north by the Alps, on the south it reached to the Ligustic sea, and the Appennines parted it from Etruria.

Under the common name of Cisalpine Gaul was comprehended LIGURIA, chief town Genoa; GALLIA CISPADANA, chief town Bononia; and GALLIA TRANS-PADANA, chief town Mediolanum. To this division of Italy may be referred the countries lying under the Alps, called the Subalpine countries.

II. ITALY properly so called, extended on the coast of the Adriatic from the city Ancona, to the river Trento, and on the Mediterranean from the Macra to the Silarus.

This tract contained ETRURIA, UMBRIA, SABINIUM, PICENUM, and the countries of the VESTINI, MARRUCINI, PELIGNI, MARSI, TRENTANI, SAMNITES, HIRPINI, CAMPANI, and PICENTINI.

III. MAGNA GRÆCIA: this country was called Greece, because most of the cities on the coast were Greek colonies.

It comprehended APULIA, LUCANIA, and the country of the BRUTII.

The most remarkable mountains were the Alps and the Appennines. The mountains Maficus, Gaurus,

* Varro.

† Dion. Halicar. Virgil.

‡ Called also Gallia Togata, from the use of the Roman Toga, the inhabitants of these parts being, after the social war, admitted to the right of citizens.

Fifalia, Veranus, and Garganus, are mentioned by ancient historians and geographers.

The rivers of note were, the PADUS or ERIDANUS, now the Po.—The DRURIA, the SESSITES, the TICINUM, the ADDUA, the OLLUS, the MINCIUS, the TANARUS, the TRIBIA, the ATHESIS, and the RHE-NUS BONONIENSIS; now called the Dora, Sessia, Tesino, Adda, Oglio, Mincio, Tanaro, Trebia, Adige, and Reno di Bologna; spring from the Alps.—The ARNUS, and the TIBER, flow from the Appennines.—The LIRIS; the VULTURNUS; the SYBARIS; the CRATHIS; the AUFIDUS; the ATERNUS, and the METAVRUS; now the Garigliano; Volturno; Silaro; Corbile; Crati; L'Ofanto, Pescara, and Metauro. These were all rivers of great note.

Augustus Cæsar, abolishing the ancient names of Gallia and Magna Græcia, restored the common name, Italia, to the whole country, from Illyricum, and the Alps, quite round to the southmost extremity of Italy.

SECTION XII.

GERMANIA.

GERMANIA, or ANCIENT GERMANY, was divided from the ancient Gauls by the Rhine on the west, and the Danube on the south; it was bounded on the north by the Hercynian forest, the German and Northern oceans on the north-west, and Scythia and Sarmatia on the east.

This tract of land was inhabited by the following nations.

The CIMBRI, who possessed the present Denmark, and gave to it the name of Cimbrica Chersonesus; the CHAUCI; the FRISI; the BRUCTERI; the MARSI; the USIPII; the TENCTERI; the JUHONES; the COTTI; the MATTIACI; the UEI; the SEDUSII; the NARISCI;

NARISCI; the MARCOMANNI; the TANGRI; the TREVIRI; the TRIBOCCI; the NEMETES; the VAN-GIONES; the MEDIOMATRICI; the RAURACI; the VINDELICI; the NORICI; the HERMUNDURI; the BOII; the QUADI; the BASTARNÆ; the MARTINGI;
 the BURII; the BOKADES; the LYGII; the RHÆTII;
 the SUEVI; the LONGOBARDI; the BURGUNDI; the SEMNONES; the AVIONES; the REUDIGNI; the EU-
 DOLES; the SWARDONES; the RUGII; the LEMNO-
 VII; the HERULI; the GOTHONES; the SIDUI-CARINI; the ANGLI; the SAXI; the ÆSTII; the GEPIDÆ; the CHAIBONI.

Rivers remarkable were, the DANUBE, now called the Ister; the RHINE; the VISTULA, now called the Weichsel; the DRAVE or the DRAW; the MORAW;
 the NECKAR; the ELBE, called by the Romans
Albus, by the Germans Elve, and now Elbe; the LUPPIA, now Lippe; the ISALA, now Isel; the NAB; the VESER, more anciently called Visurgis; and the EMS, more anciently called the Amisa.

ANCIENT GERMANY abounded with woods and forests, among which the most famed one was called the Hercynian, and by the Greeks the Orcinian Forest.
 The Black Forest is another famed one, which parted the Suevi from the Cherusci. The Cælian Forest, or Cælia Sylva, was also very famous.

SECTION XIII.

PANNONIA.

THE extensive tract of land called PANNONIA was bounded on the west by the Norici; on the south by Dalmatia; on the east by Moësia; and on the north by the Danube; so that it comprehended the modern Carniola, Croatia, Windisch Marck, part of Austria, part of Hungary, all Sclavonia and Bosnia, and part of Servia.

It was divided into Upper and Lower Pannonia *, having the Upper to the west, and the Lower on the east side.

SIRMIMUM was the capital city of all Pannonia. Other cities of note were, Segeſta, Nauportum, Vindoniana, Scarabantia, and Taurunum.

SECTION XIV.

SARMATIA EUROPÆA.

SARMATIA EUROPÆA †, or Sarmatia in Europe, extended from the Vistula, now the Weissel, on the west, parting it from Germania, to the Euxine sea, the Bosphorus Cimmerius, the Palus Mæotis, and the Tanais, dividing it from Asia and the Asiatic Sarmatia.

In this extensive tract of land, comprehending the present Lithonia, Lithuania, Russia, and Crim Tartary, dwell the following nations;—The BURGIONES, CARIONES, SUDENI, GELONI, HAMAXOBII, AGATHYRSI, BORUSÆ, MELANCHLÆNÆ, ALAUNI, JAZYGES, RONOLENI, BASTARNÆ, CARPI or CARPATES, SIDONES, BORANI, and VENEDI.

The length of European Sarmatia, from the conflux of the rivers Iſſer and Patiffus, to the mouth of the Obi, was 540 German leagues. Its breadth, from the Uralga to the White sea, 360 ‡.

* Ptolemy. Diodorus.

† Called also Scythia by Herodotus, Strabo, Pliny, Diodorus.

They lived in wains; hence the appellation Hamaxobii: on rapine, and on the blood and milk of mares; hence the appellation of Hippomolgi: and were the descendants of the Medes; hence we see them called by Bochart Saar Madai.

‡ Pliny, l. 5 and 6.—Strabo, l. 7.—Mela, l. 3. &c.

SECTION

SECTION XV.

The Islands in the MEDITERRANEAN.

SICILIA.

THIS Island was anciently known by the names of Sicania, Sicilia, and Trinacria.

It lies between the 35th deg. 40 min. and the 38th deg. 30 min. of north latitude, extending in longitude from 35 to 39 degrees. Its length 200 miles, breadth 180, and circumference 600.

The most ancient inhabitants of Sicily were the Cyclopes, the Lestrigones, and the Phæaces.

SYRACUSE was its metropolis. Its other cities of note were Drepanum, Agrigentum, Catana, Panormus, and Messana or Zancle.

In Sicilia stands mount Etna, famous for its frequent and dreadful eruptions. The fire which is continually burning in the bowels of this mountain, made the poets place here the forges of the Cyclops, under the direction of Vulcan, and the prison of the giants who rebelled against Jupiter.

The ÆOLIAN Islands

lie off the north coast of Sicily in the Tyrrhenian sea. They received their name from Æolus, who is supposed to have reigned here. They were called also the Vulcanian Islands, and by the Greeks, the Hiphestiades. There are seven of them. They are distant about 40 miles from the north coast of Sicily.

SARDINIA, more anciently SANDALIORIS, and ICHNUSA.

This island lies between the 27th and 29th degrees of longitude, and between the 39th and 41st degree, 15 min. of latitude.

Its ancient inhabitants were divided into the Corfi, Balari, Diagebrenses, and Sardi Pelliti.

C O R S I C A.

This small island lies over against the gulph of Genoa, at about the distance of 90 miles from that city.

MELITA, MALTA, OCYGIA, CALYPSUS INSULA, &c.

The isle known by these several names lies in lat. 34, 4, and long. 34, 45, and distant from Sicily about 60 miles.

Melita was the metropolitan city.

S E C T I O N XVI.

The Islands of the PROPONTIS, ÆGEAN, ICARIAN, CRETAN, MYRTOAN, and IONIAN Seas.

THE most considerable islands in the Propontis were,

P R O C O N N E S U S.

This island lay not far from Asia, over-against Cyzicum.

B E S B I C U S

was a small island between Cyzicum and the mouth of the Rhydacus.

The islands in the ÆGEAN Sea were,

T E N E D O S

was remarkable only for its lying opposite old Troy, and being the place to which the Greeks retired, and left the Trojans in a fatal security.

L E S B O S

was famous for the number of philosophers and poets it produced. It was about 56 miles distant from Tenedos.

C H I O S

C H I O S

lay about 80 miles west of Smyrna, between Lesbos and Samos, opposite the peninsula of Ionia.

S A M O S

lies opposite to Ephesus, on the coast of Asia Minor, about seven miles from the continent. This island is supposed to have been the native country of Juno.

P A T M O S or P A T H M O S is about 30 miles in compass. The Romans used this island as a place of banishment; under which punishment St. John resided here, and is supposed to have wrote his Revelations in a cave, which is shewn by a few Greek monks who are upon the island.

The CYCLADES islands lie in a circle round DELOS, the chief of them; which, though not above six miles in compass, was one of the most celebrated of all the Grecian islands, as being the birth-place of Apollo and Dionis.

P A R O S

lies 28 miles from Delos; and was famous for its marble, which was of an exquisite whiteness.

C Y T H E R A.

This island lies over-against Malea, a promontory of Laconia. It was remarkable for being the favourite residence of Venus.

T H E R A

lies between Crete and the Cyclades. The island was consecrated to Apollo.

S A S O N

lies between Aulon, a city of Macedon, and Brundisium in Italy.

C O R C Y R A

C O R C Y R A

lies over-against the coast of Epirus, called more anciently Phæacia; and was inhabited by the luxurious Alcinous, who entertained Ulysses, when cast on shore there.

I T H A C A, famous for being the birth-place of Ulysses, is about 25 miles in circuit.

Z A C Y N T H U S.

This island is about 60 miles in compass, and lies 12 miles south of an island called Cephallenia.

L E U C A S

was anciently a peninsula, joined to the main-land of Acarnania by an isthmus of 50 paces over, which was cut by the Carthaginians.

The S T R O P H A D E S were two small islands, over-against Arcadia, in Peloponnesus.

E U B E A

was formerly joined to Bœotia by an isthmus, as it is at present by a bridge. It lies opposite to the continent of Attica, Bœotia, and Locris.

C H A P T E R II.

Of A S I A.

S E C T I O N I.

A S I A in general.

VARIOUS are the opinions as to the common name of ASIA ; some of the ancient geographers derive it from Asia, the daughter of Oceanus and Thetis, wife of Japetus, and by him mother to Prometheus ; others deduce it from Asius, the son of Atys, king of Lydia, from whom that kingdom, first, and in length of time the whole continent, was named Asia. But all that has or can be said on this head is bare conjecture ; it will not, therefore, be worth our while to dwell on enquiries of this nature *.

The boundaries of this extensive country on the north and east could not be determined by the Ancients ; on the west, it was separated from Lybia or Africa by the Egyptian Isthmus, now the Isthmus of Suez, and the Sinus Arabicus or Red Sea ; and from Europe by the Ægean Sea, the Hellepont, the Propontis, the Bosphorus, the Euxine Sea, and the river Tanais ; and, on the south, by the Oceanus Eons, or Indian Ocean, sailed over by Nearchus, under Alexander.

Asia is divided into Major and Minor ; but this is a distinction perhaps of the lower age. The Ancients distinguished it into Citerior, or Asia Minor, and Ulterior, or Asia Magna.

This vast extent of territory was successively governed by the Assyrians, the Medes, the Persians, and the Greeks; but the immense regions of India and modern China were very little known to Alexander, or the conquerors of the ancient world.

* Eratosthenes thinks it most probable, that this part of the ancient world received its name from Asia, a small district about the river Cayster and mount Tmolus.

The principal regions that divide this country are as follow.

S E C T I O N II.

S Y R I A.

ANCIENT geographers are not agreed upon the exact extent of this country; I shall, therefore, confine myself to the proper Syria; to which we may venture to set bounds, and determine its dimensions.

SYRIA PROPER lay between the Mediterranean on the west, and the river Euphrates on the east; and between mount Taurus on the north, and Arabia the Desert, Palestine, and Phenice, on the south.

This country, in the very early ages of time, was variously divided; in after-ages, it was divided into four principal kingdoms, Zobab, Damascus, Hamath, and Geshur; of which Beir-rebco, Issiab, and Maacha, names found in the Scripture, were sub-divisions. Afterwards it was divided into the following provinces; namely,

COMMAGENE. SELEUCIS, in which stood the famous city of Antioch. APAMENE. CYRRHESTICA, where stood the city of Hierapolis. CALCIDENE. CHALYBONTIS. PALMYRENE, remarkable for its capital city Palmyra, whose ruins are deservedly esteemed one of the wonders of the present world. COELE-SYRIA, where were seated the cities Heliopolis, now Baibek, whose magnificent ruins claim the admiration of travellers; and Damascus, now Sham. LAODICENE.

The people were called Syri, and Aramæi, by the sacred writers, and were of a voluptuous and slavish turn*.

* Strabo.

The rivers of the country are the Orontes; and the Chrysorrhoas or Barrady. The rivers Abana and Pharphar were only branches of the latter.

S E C T I O N III.

B A B Y L O N I A or C H A L D Æ A.

TH E most ancient names by which this country was known were, Shinar, Sennaar, Senjar, Singara, &c. Babylonia is universally supposed to have been borrowed from the tower and city of Babel, and Chaldea from the Chaldeans or Chasdim. The inhabitants were much addicted to, and noted for astrology.

This extensive region was bounded eastward by the river Tigris, which divided it from Assyria; southward by the conflux of the two rivers and the Persian gulph; and westward by Arabia Deserta; how far it extended northward is very uncertain; but it must have been bounded by some part of Mesopotamia, but by what part of it is past our determination.

Its metropolis was BABEL * or BABYLON, built by Nimrod, and the oldest city in the world. It was in compass 60 miles, with walls 200 feet high, and 50 broad, built with brick and bitumen.

S E C T I O N IV.

B I T H Y N I A.

TH I S tract of land was bounded on the west by Bosphorus Thracius and part of the Propontis; on the south by the river Rhyndacus and mount Olympus; on the north by the Euxine sea; and on the east by the river Parthenius.

* Moses.

It had anciently the names of Mysia, Mygdonia, Bebrycia, Mariandynia, and Bitthynia.

The metropolitan city of this country was N I - COMEDIA.

S E C T I O N V.

P E R S I A.

TH E boundaries assigned to Persia has varied very much in different ages; Ptolemy makes it extend on the north to Media, on the east to Carmania, on the west to Susiana, and on the south to the Persian gulph; but this relates to Persia considered only as a province. I shall here consider it in another light, and give the boundaries of the Persian empire as they anciently stood. In which extent was included Media and Assyria.

The ancient empire of Persia then extended in length from the Hellepont to the mouth of the river Indus, about 2800 English miles; and in breadth from the Pontus to the mouth of the Arabian Gulph, about 2000 miles.

This extensive tract of land was divided into the following provinces:

GEDROSIA, CARMANIA, DRANGIANA, ARACHOSIA, PAROPAMISUS, BACTRIA, MARGIANA, HYRCANIA, ARIA, PARTHIA, PERSIS, SUSIANA. To these were added the provinces of MEDIA and ASSYRIA; but as they made so great a figure in ancient history, I reserve a particular description of them to the following Sections.

No country has had a greater variety of names given to it than Persia; in the holy Scripture we find it called ELAM and PARAS; and in the oriental writers AGJEM, IRAN; and SHAHISTAN, that is, the dominions of the SHAH.

* Strabo.

In respect to rivers, there is but one navigable stream in the whole country, which is called ARAXIS.

S E C T I O N VI.

M E D I A.

THIS country, once the seat of a powerful empire, received its name from Madai, the third son of Japhet.

It was bounded on the north by part of the Caspian sea; on the south by Persis, Susiana, and Assyria; on the east by Parthia and Hyrkania; and on the west by Armenia Major.

Its division anciently was into the following provinces; namely, TROPATANE; CHAROMITHRENE; DARITES; MARCIANE; AMARIACE; and SYROMEDIA. All these, by a later division, were reduced to two only, called MEDIA MAGNA, and MEDIA ATROPATIA, or simply ATROPATIA*.

The capital city of all Media was Ecbatan, celebrated by the Ancients for its walls.

The rivers of note in Media were the Straton, the Amardus, the Cyrus, and the Cambyfes.

S E C T I O N VII.

A S S Y R I A.

THIS very extensive country received its name from Asbur, the second son of Shem, its first planter after the flood †.

The exact extent of Assyria is very uncertain; but it is agreed upon by most geographers, that it lay eastward of the Tigris, and extended almost northeast and south-west from the springs of that river and the lake Van, to the province of Klazeßan in Persia.

* Strabo.

† Moses.

The situation of the cities built by Assur we are at a loss to determine ; all that we can collect from tradition is, that Nineveh stood on the east side of the Dijlat or Tigris.

ASSYRIA was divided and arranged by the Greeks into the following provinces, bordering on Armenia ; ARRAPACHITIS, then ADIABENE, and to the east ARBELITES ; to the north of Adiabene, CALACINE, and lower down to the south APPOLONIATIS, and at length SITTACENE *. To these the ancient geographers added the provinces named ATURIA, ARTACENE, and CHALONITIS, as part of this country ; but there is no pretending to set bounds to these several divisions, or assigning to each the cities that might in former ages have belonged to them.

The rivers of Assyria were the TIGRIS, which watered all the western parts of this country ; the LYCUS, the CAPRUS, and the GORGUS, at almost an equal distance from each other, and supposed to have been all between the two cities of Ninus or Nineveh, and Seleucia.

S E C T I O N VIII.

P H O E N I C I E.

THIS small tract of land, as exactly as we can collect from ancient historians, lay between the 32d and 35th degrees of north latitude. How many degrees of longitude it took up we are at a loss to determine ; but it could take up no great space. This, as near as we can gather, was the extent of this kingdom and its situation. In general, we may say, it was bounded by Syria on the north and the east ; by Judab on the south ; and the Mediterranean on the west.

* Ptolemy.

In this tract of land stood the famous cities of Tyre, Sidon, Tripoli, &c.

Whence this country borrowed the name of Phœnice is not determined. Anciently it was called Rhabbothin and Colpitis. The Jews gave it the name of Canaan, though they knew some part of it by the name of Syrophœnice.

The Phœnicians are said to have first invented letters. See Lucan, l. 3 v. 220, &c.

SECTION IX.

CAPPADOCIA and PONTUS.

THIS country was anciently known by the general name of Syria or Assyria, and its inhabitants by that of the Leucosyri.

CAPPADOCIA formerly comprized all that tract of land which lies between mount Taurus and the Euxine sea, and was divided by the Persians into two Satrapies or governments; by the Macedonians into two kingdoms; the one called Cappadocia Magna, the other Cappadocia ad Pontum, and commonly Pontus.

The capital of all Cappadocia was anciently Mazaca or Eusebia, called afterwards Cæsarea by Tiberius in honour of Augustus. The city of Comana was famous for a temple consecrated to Bellona, whose priests and attendants amounted to the number of 6000 and upwards.

SECTION X.

ARMENIA.

WHENCE this tract of land received the name of ARMENIA is very uncertain. The Greeks derived it from one Armenus, who, after attending Jason in the Argonautic expedition, settled in this country.

D

ARMENIA

ARMENIA was, anciently, divided into the greater and the lesser, or ARMENIA MAJOR and ARMENIA MINOR.

I. ARMENIA MAJOR was bounded on the south by mount Taurus, separating it from Mesopotamia; on the east by Media; on the north by Iberia and Albania; on the west by Armenia Minor and some Pontic nations, and the Euphrates.

II. ARMENIA MINOR was bounded on the east by the Euphrates, parting it from Armenia Major; on the south by mount Taurus; and on the west and north by the mountains Mons Scordiscus and Antitaurus.

The Romans divided this country into four provinces, called LAVIANA, MARIANA, ARARENA, and MELITENE.

Joining to Armenia on the north, between the Euxine and Caspian Seas, lay the small provinces of Iberia, Albania, and Chelcis.

SECTION XI.

ASIA MINOR, or ASIA properly so called.

ASIA MINOR, or, as it was commonly termed, ASIA PROPER, or ASIA PROPERLY SO CALLED, was bounded on the north by Bitynia and Pontus, extending from Galatia to Propontis; on the east by Galatia, Pamphylia, and Lycia; on the south by part of Lycia and the Riccan Sea; on the west by the Hellespont, by the Ægean, Icarian, and Myrtoan Seas.

It lies between the 35th and 41st degrees of north latitude, and extends in longitude from 55 to 62 degrees.

This tract of land, thus bounded, comprehended the provinces of PHRYGIA, MYSIA, LYDIA, CARIA, ÆOLIS, IONIA, and IORIS.

The most remarkable cities in these provinces were, TROY or ILIUM in Phrygia; CYZICUS in Mysia;

SARDIS

SARDIS in Lydia; TRIPOLIS in Caria; HALICARNASSUS in Doris; CYME or CUMA in Æolis; EPHE-SUS and SMYRNA in Ionía.

River of note was, the Mæander, which rises on the hill Celæne, and, after 600 windings, empties itself into the Archipelago.

Mountains remarkable were, IDA in Phrygia, where Paris judged the three goddesses; and mount LATMOS in Ionía, where the Moon, as the poets feigned, made her private visits to Endymion.

S E C T I O N XII.

A R A B I A.

A R A B I A, called anciently by its inhabitants, Arabab *, is situate between the twelfth and thirty-fifth degrees of north latitude, and the fifty-third and seventy-eighth of longitude.

It is bounded on the west by Palæstine, part of Syria, the Isthmus of Suez, and the Red Sea; on the east by the Euphrates, the Persian Gulph, and Bay of Ormuz; on the north by part of Syria, Diyar-Beer, Irak, and Khuzestan; and on the south by the streights of Bab-al-Mandab and the Indian Ocean.

ARABIA was divided into three greater parts, termed Arabia Petrea, Arabia Deserta, and Arabia Felix †.

The chief city of Arabia Petrea was PETRA; the ancient Towns in Arabia Deserta have long since disappeared. The metropolis of Arabia Felix was SABA, famous for the residence of the Queen of Seba.

* Some imagine, that the Ἕσπεροι, in Homer, denotes the Arabs, as if they were called Ἕσπεροι, Black, Dark.

† Ptolemy.

In Arabia Petræa stands the mountains Oreb and Sinai *, famous in sacred history, being the scene of many miraculous appearances.

S E C T I O N XIII.

PALÆSTINA, or the HOLY LAND.

THIS once happy and fertile spot, and the peculiar object of the divine Providence, was first called the Land of Canaan, from Noah's grandson, by whom it was peopled; but it has been since more distinguished by other names; such as, the Land of Promise, the Land of God, the Land of Israel and of Judah, the Holy Land, and sometimes, by way of pre-eminence, the Land.

It was called Palestine, from the Palestines, or Philistines, who possessed a great part of it; and Judea, or Judæa Palæstina, from Judah, whose tribe was the most considerable of the twelve, and possessed Jerusalem and the countries adjacent.

We Christians have dignified it with the title of the HOLY LAND, on account of its being the place of our Saviour's birth, the scene of his preaching, and manifold miracles, especially the place in which he accomplished the great work of our redemption.

Its boundaries are as follow: it was inclosed on the west by the Mediterranean; and, on the east, by the lake Asphaltites, the Jordan, and the sea of Tiberias, or of Galilee, and the Samachonite lake: to the north it had the mountains of Libanus, or rather of Anti-libanus, or the province of Phœnicia; and to the south, that of Edom, or Idumea; from which it was likewise parted by another ridge of mountains.

It extends about 200 miles in length, and about 80 in breadth.

* Moses.

The most considerable division of Palæstine, in ancient times, was that which was made by divine appointment, among the twelve tribes. The next remarkable one was made by king Solomon, who divided his kingdom into twelve provinces or districts. But the most fatal of all was, that which was made under his imprudent son Rehoboam, when, by the divine permission, ten or twelve tribes revolted from him, under the conduct of Jeroboam, who became head of this new monarchy, stiled the kingdom of Israel in opposition to that of Judah, the title which the maimed kingdom of Rehoboam was known by from that time downwards.

Under the Romans, it began to be divided into Tetrarchies and Toparchies: their names, and remarkable towns, were,

I. IDUMEA;—chief town Gaza.

II. JUDEA;—Towns of note were, HIERUSALEM (afterwards called Elia Capitolina) Bethlehem, Ramah, Emmaus, Arimathea, Lydda, Joppa, Azotus, and Jericho.

III. SAMARIA;—Towns remarkable were, Sichar, or Sichem, Antipatris, Saron, Enon, Salim.

IV. GALILÆA;—Towns of note mentioned in the New Testament are, Cæsarea, Nazareth, Cana, Naim, Genesaret, Capernaum, Bethsaida, Chorazin, Tiberias, Magdala, Dalmanutha.

V. PERÆA, or JUDEA beyond the Jordan;—Its chief city was Machærus.

It must be here observed, that in assigning the above boundaries, I have confined myself to that part which is properly called the Land of Promise; as for the other part, viz. that which lay on the other side Jordan, called Peræa, and which makes the fifth division of the Romans; its exact boundaries cannot be fixed.

The highest and most considerable mountains in this tract of land were, Lebanon and Antilebanon, so often celebrated in Holy Writ. Mountains, next in dignity for height, are Hermor and Tabor; the latter being rendered venerable, as having been the scene of our Saviour's transfiguration. Other mountains of note were, Carmel, Olivet, Calvary alias Golgotha, held in the greatest veneration on account of our Saviour's crucifixion upon it; and Gikon.

The seas were, the Mediterranean, the Dead Sea, or Lake of Sodom, the sea of Tiberias, the Samachonite sea, and, the sea of Jazer.

The only river that deserves mentioning is the Jordan.

S E C T I O N XIV.

SCYTHIA and SARMATIA in Asia.

THIS prodigious tract of land called Scythia in Asia, was parted from the European Sarmatia, by the Asiatic Sarmatia, and extended eastwards to almost the 110th degree of east longitude. The northern confines of this vast territory reached to the Hyperborean or Frozen Sea, called also by the Ancients the Scythian Sea, the Cronian, Amalchian, the Dead Sea, and by some other names which expressed its extreme coldness. On the east they were supposed to have extended to the promontory of Tabis, and to have been bounded by the Cassian mountains, which parted Scythia from Serica, now Cattai or northern China; and on the south by the Eoum or Indian Sea, and mount Caucasus, and the Caspian Sea.

These regions they divided into three parts; namely, Scythia within; Scythia without, or beyond the Imaus; and Sarmatia, which lay between the former and the European Sarmatia.

SCYTHIA did, therefore, comprehend, in general, Great Tartary, and Russia in Asia.

The

The people that inhabited these regions were, the BACTRIANS, SOGDIANS, GANDARI, SACKS, and MASSAGETES.

SARMATIA contained Albania, Iberia, and Cholcis, which make now the Circassian Tartary, and the province of Georgia.

Rivers of any note were, the Rba or Wolga, the Oby, Lena, Amur, and Helum.

The most remarkable mountain was Imaus.

S E C T I O N XV.

I N D I A.

THIS vast region is situated between the 69th and 90th degrees of longitude from the meridian of London, and the 8th and 36th degrees of north latitude, extending from the most western mouth of the Ganges, and from Mus-Tag, or mount Imaus, to cape Comorin.

The old geographers divided this country into two parts by the river Ganges, which they called INDIA intra GANGEM, and INDIA extra GANGEM.

I. INDIA INTRA GANGEM was limited on the west by the Indus; on the north by mount Imaus; on the east by the Ganges; and on the south by the Indian ocean.

In this part of India stood the city of Taxila, famous in the wars of Alexander the Great.

Here were seated the Gymnosophites, or Indian Sages, and the Brachmans, a branch of the Gymnosophites.

II. INDIA EXTRA GANGEM was terminated on the west by the Ganges; on the north by Scythia; on the east by the country of the Sinæ; and on the south by the Indian ocean.

The Aurea Chersonesus, part of India extra Gangem, and now called Malacca, is supposed to be the OPHIR of Scripture.

Rivers of India were the Indus and the Ganges.

The mountains belonging to this country were, the Imaus, Emodus, Paropamisus, and Caucasus, which formed a long ridge of mountains, called by the present Tartars the mount Pamer and Mus-Tag.

S E C T I O N XVI.

S E R I C A.

S E R I C A, or the country of the Seres, was bounded on the west by Scythia extra Imaum; on the north and east by the Terra Incognita; and on the south by India extra Gangem.

It answered to that part of the country called by the Tartars Katbay.

S E C T I O N XVII.

The Country of the S I N Æ.

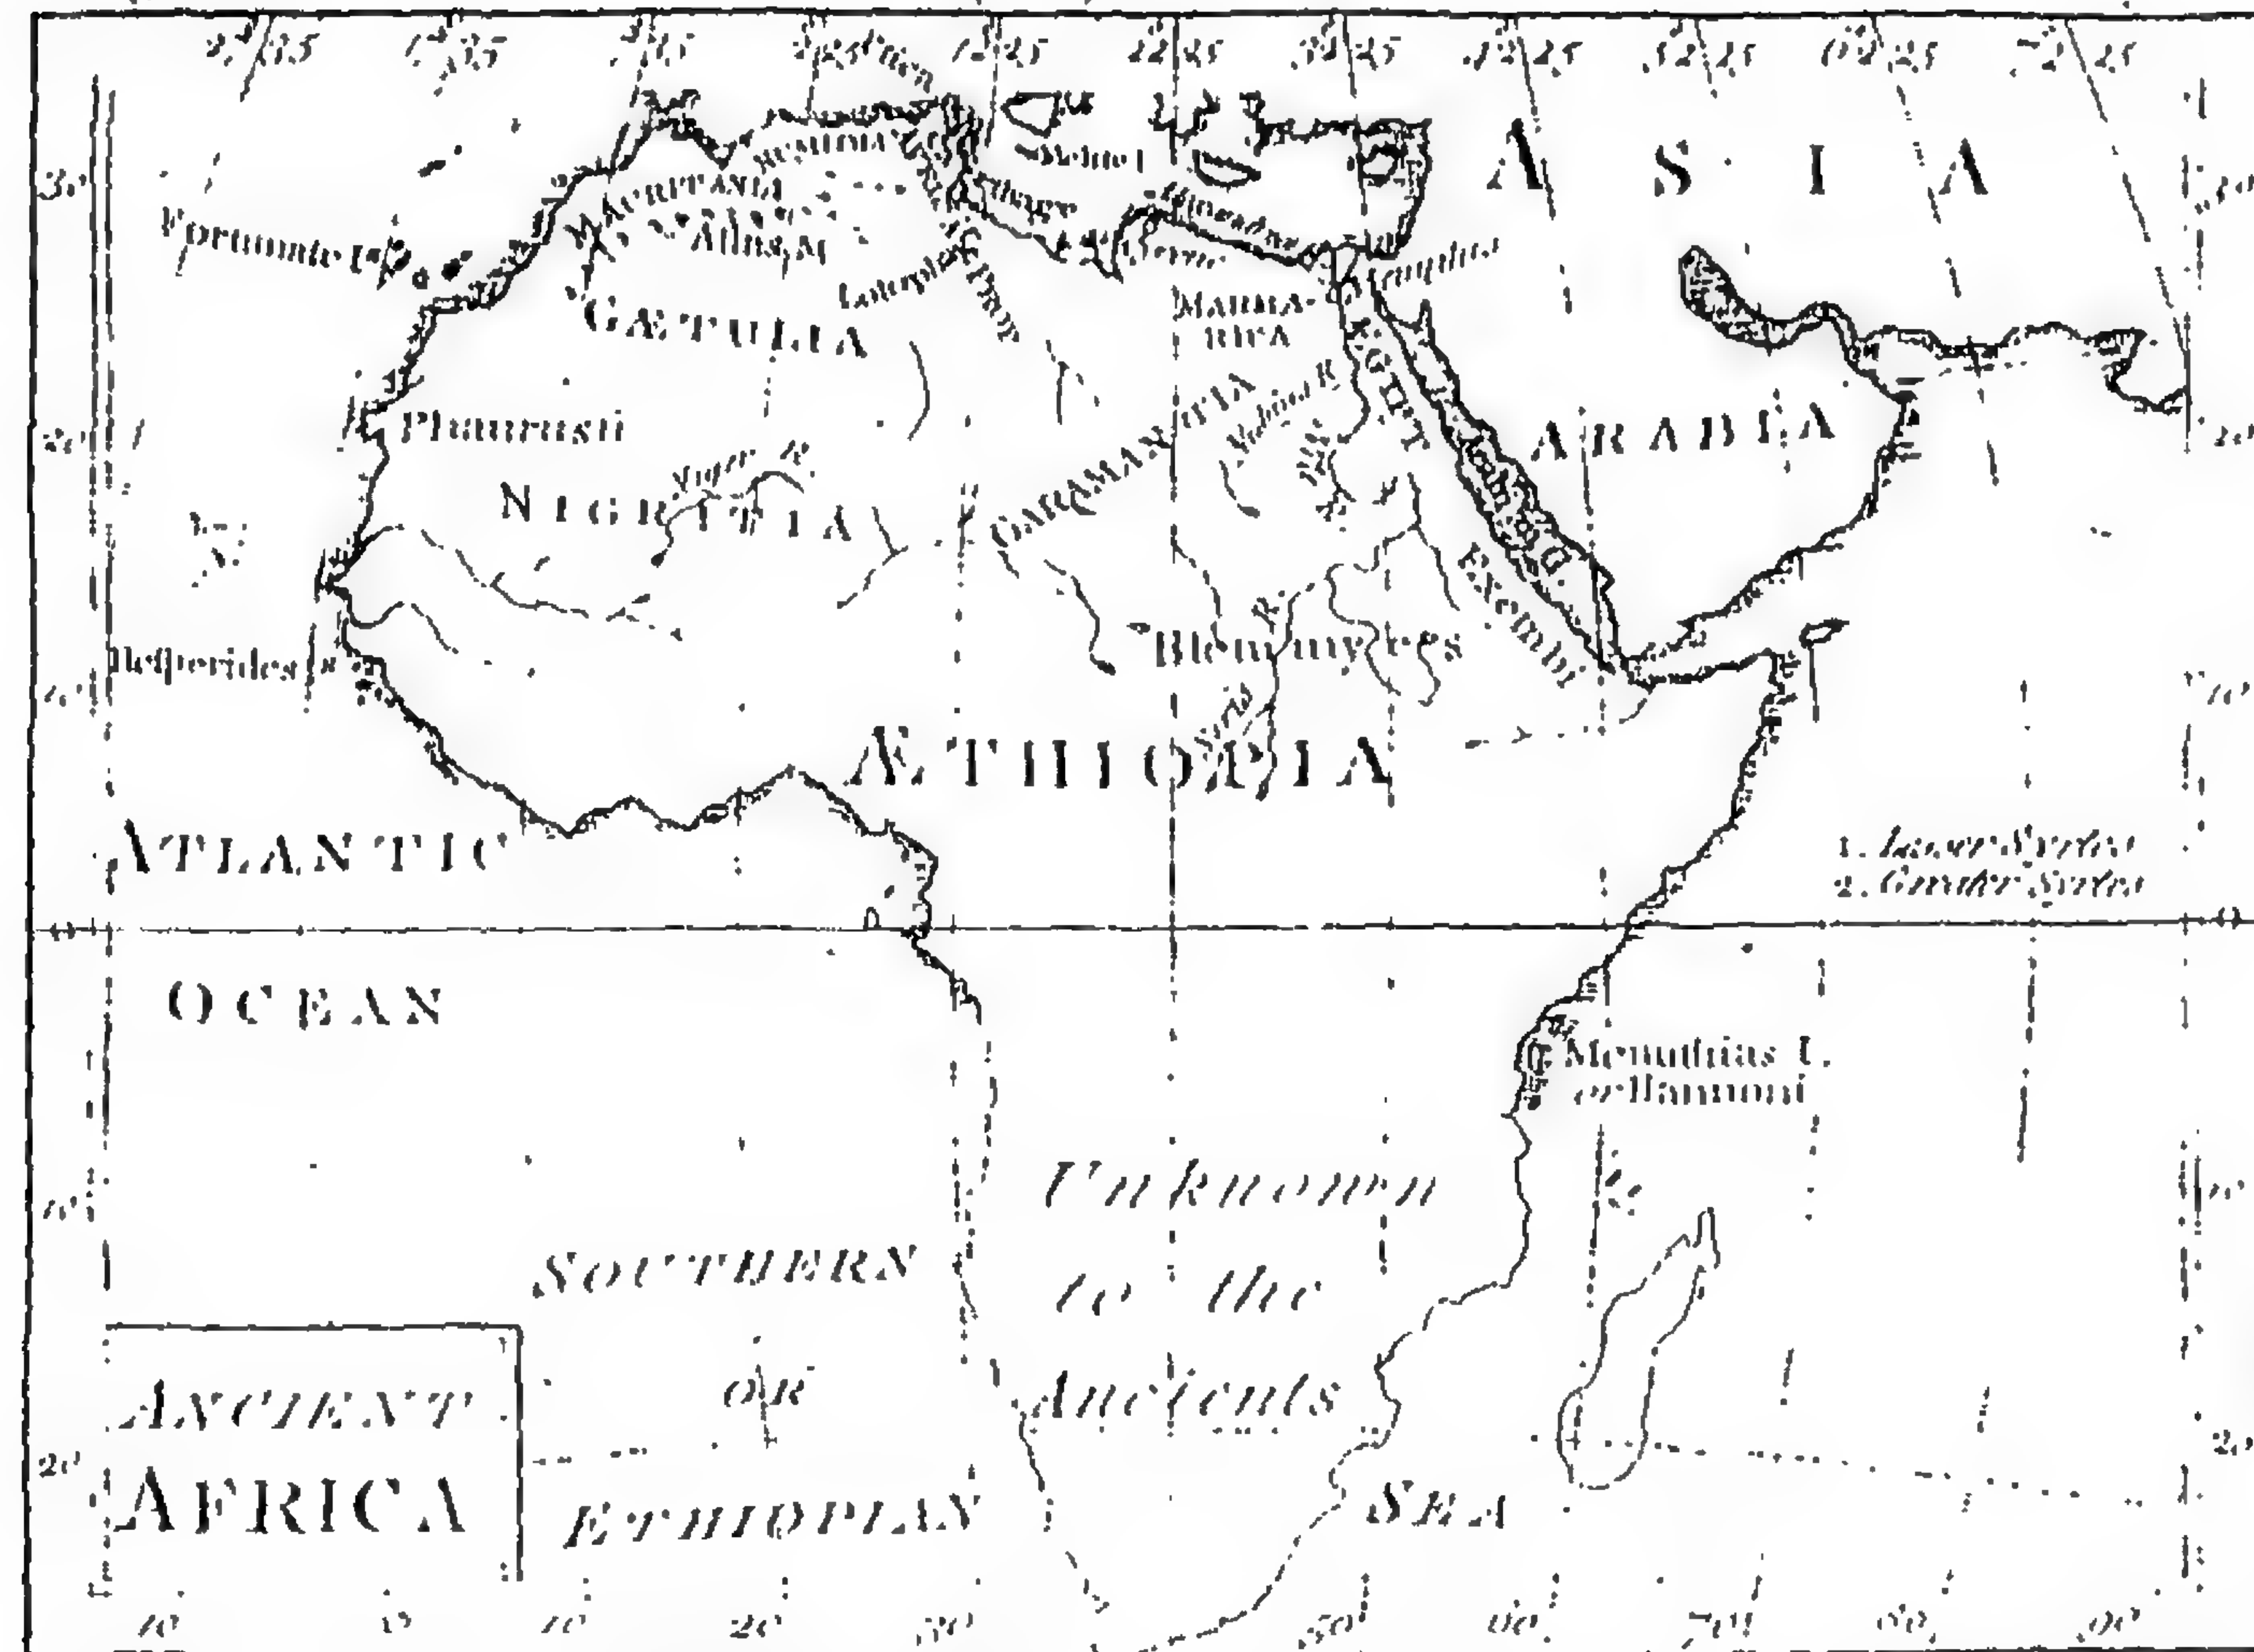

T H E tract these people occupied was bounded on the east and south by the Terra Incognita; on the north by Serica; and on the west by India extra Gangem.

It seems to have answered to the tract comprehending the kingdoms of Siam, Laos, Camboya, Tonquin, and Cochinchina.

Long. W.

Long. E. from London.

Page 41

Long. W.

Long. E. from Ferro.

T. Kitchin Sculp.

CHAPTER III.

Of AFRICA. . .

SECTION I.

AFRICA in general.

THE extensive tract of land now before us was known to the Romans by the name of *Africa, and to the Grecians by that of Lybia†. It contained once several kingdoms and states, eminent for the liberal arts, for wealth, and power, and the most extensive commerce. The kingdoms of Egypt and Ethiopia, in particular, were much celebrated; and the rich and powerful state of Carthage, that once formidable rival to Rome itself, extended her commerce to every part of the then known world; even the British shores were visited by her fleets, till Juba, king of Mauritania, unhappily called in the Romans, who, with the assistance of the Mauritians, subdued Carthage, and, by degrees, all the neighbouring kingdoms and states.

AFRICA is a peninsula of a prodigious extent, joined to the continent of Asia by a small neck of

* Or Afrikia, derived from the Phœnician or Punic, הברקה HEVRSA (for the orientals, for the most part, pronounced the second letter of their alphabet like a V) i. e. Vreca, Varca, or Barca, the name of a most remarkable part of this country, and one of the nations of Cyrenaica.

† Derived from the Hebrew word לאב, signifying a dry, parched country. Such an appellation agrees extremely well with what the Ancients have related of Lybia.

land,

land, now called the Isthmus of Suez. It is bounded north by the Mediterranean sea, which parts it from Europe, and from Asia Minor; east, by the Isthmus of Suez, which parts it from Syria, and, by the Sinus Arabicus, at present the Red Sea, which parts it from Arabia; south, by the Ethiopian or Southern ocean; west, by the Atlantic ocean.

It was divided into the following regions.

S E C T I O N II.

E G Y P T.

EGYPT was called by its ancient inhabitants Ckemia, from Ham, the son of Noah. But the name by which it is generally denoted in Scripture is, the land of Mizraim. It received its Greek name of Egyptus from the darkness of its soil, and the dark colour both of its rivers and inhabitants.

EGYPT is situate between the 48th and 53d degrees of longitude, and the 24th and 33d degrees of north latitude; its length from north to south about 200 miles, and the breadth of its coast on the Mediterranean, from east to west, nearly 300 miles.

It was bounded on the south by the kingdom of Sudan; on the north by the Mediterranean sea; on the east by the Arabian Gulph, or Red Sea, and Isthmus of Suez; on the west by a region of Lybia, called Marmarica.

This tract of land was anciently divided into three parts; the UPPER EGYPT or THEBAIS, called in the Scripture Patmos; the MIDDLE EGYPT, or HEP-TANOMIS, so called from the seven Nomes or Praefectures into which it was divided; and the LOWER EGYPT, the best part of which was the Delta.

In UPPER EGYPT or THEBAIS stood the great city of THEBES, deservedly reckoned one of the finest cities in the world. Its length, before it was ruined by the emperor Cambyſes, was no less than fifty-two miles

miles and an half. Here also stood the famous statue of Memnon, which is said to have uttered a sound daily, as soon as it was touched by the rays of the rising sun.

IN HEPTANOMIS was the famed city of MEMPHIS, once the metropolis of all Egypt, near which stand the pyramids, those stupendous structures, which were deservedly reckoned by the Ancients among the wonders of the world.

IN LOWER EGYPT stood the much-celebrated city of Alexandria, built by Alexander the Great.

The Egyptian Labyrinth, from whence Dædalus is supposed to have taken the model of that which he afterwards built in Crete. It stood near the lake Mæris, and seems to have been designed as a pantheon, or universal temple of all the Egyptian deities. It was also the place of the general assembly of the magistracy of the whole nation, those of all the provinces meeting here to feast and sacrifice, and to judge causes of great consequence.

The lake of Mæris is said to have been yet more wonderful than the labyrinth or pyramids, being fifteen leagues in circuit; which is prodigious, if we consider, that it was the work of mens hands. Its use was to correct the irregularities of the Nile, by receiving the superfluous waters when that river rose too high.

The only river remarkable in Egypt was the NILE. The sources or springs of this river were absolutely unknown to the Ancients. It enters Egypt out of Ethiopia, under the tropic of Cancer, pouring itself down no less than seven cataracts or falls; and, having passed through the Upper and Middle Egypt, empties itself into the sea by seven channels or mouths. On the annual inundation of this river, the fertility of Egypt depends, fattening the earth by the mud and slime it brings down with it.

SECTION

SECTION III.

N U M I D I A.

NUMIDIA was limited on the north by the Mediterranean; on the south by Gætulia; on the west by the Mulacka, which separated it from Mauritania; and on the east by Tusca, a boundary it had in common with Africa proper.

The most remarkable cities in this country were, CITRA, of considerable note in ancient history, having been the seat of Juba and Syphax; HIPPO REGIUS, TRABACA, SICCA, NARAGARA, THIRMIDA, &c.

Rivers worthy notice were, the Ampfaga, the Armua, the Rubricatus, and the Tusca.

SECTION IV.

M A U R I T A N I A.

MAURITANIA, MAURUSIA, or the country of the MAURUSII, derived its name from the Mauri, an ancient people inhabiting it, frequently mentioned by the old historians and geographers.

This tract of land was bounded on the east by the Malva or Mulucka; on the west by the Atlantic Ocean; on the south by Gætulia or Lybia Interior; and on the north by the Mediterranean.

This kingdom was divided into MAURITANIA CÆSARIENSIS, and MAURITANIA TINGITANA.

MAURITANIA CÆSARIENSIS had its name from Julia Cæsarea; its metropolis was TENEZ.

MAURITANIA TINGITANA was so called from TINGIS its capital, founded by the giant Antæus, cotemporary with Hercules, and conquered by him.

Rivers of note were, the MALVA; THALUDA; ZELIS; LIXUS; SUBUR; SALA, and DUUS.

SECTION

SECTION V.

GÆTULIA.

AS the limits of GÆTULIA have not been settled by any of the old geographers, it is impossible for me to define them; all that we can infer from the accounts we have of them in the ancient historians is, that the Gætulians were a large nation, taking up a considerable part of Lybia Interior, and possessing some territories in the neighbourhood of the Syrtes.

As the Gætulians led their flocks from pasture to pasture, living, for the most part, in tents, without any fixed habitation, the reader must not be surprized to find no town in this country worthy notice.

The rivers that watered Gætulia were, the GIR, the NIGIR, the SULUS, and the SALATHUS.

SECTION VI.

MARMARICA.

MARMARICA was bounded on the east and west by Egypt, and Cyrenaica; on the south by the Deserts of Lybia Interior; and on the north by the Mediterranean.

The cities of note were, PARÆTONIUM and PELUSIUM.

SECTION VII.

CYRENAICA.

CYRENAICA was bounded on the east by MARMARICA; on the north by the Mediterranean; and on the south by the Sahara.

The principal nations of this tract were, the Barcæi, the Psylli, and the Nasomenes.

The

The capital city of this country was CYRENE.

The principal river was LATHON.

Cyrenaica and Marmarica were sometimes comprehended under the name of Lybia proper.

S E C T I O N VIII.

R E G I O S Y R T I C A.

THE REGIO SYRTICA, so called because the two Syrtes were the northern extremities of its eastern and western limits, was bounded on the north by the Mediterranean; on the south by the country of the Nasamones, and the Sabara; on the east by Cyrenaica; and on the west by Africa Propria.

The most remarkable people that inhabited this tract of land were, the LOTOPHAGI, who lived upon the Lotus; from which circumstance they derived their name. Here Ulysses touched on his return to Ithaca.

With this tract the northern kingdom of Tripoli seems at present to correspond.

S E C T I O N IX.

A F R I C A P R O P R I A.

AFRICA PROPRIA was limited on the west by the river Tusca, or side of Numidia; by the Mediterranean or African Sea on the north; by the frontiers of the Garamantes and Deserts of Lybia Interior on the south; and by the Mediterranean, with the Lesser Syrtis, on the east.

It was divided into two provinces, the REGIO ZEUGITANA, and BYZACIUM, with which the kingdom of Tunis, under its division into Summer and Winter Circuits, at present nearly corresponds.

The

The cities worthy of notice are, CARTHAGE the metropolis, and UTICA, both famous in the Roman history; the latter in particular, for the death of young Cato, who was from thence called Cato Uticensis, or Cato of Utica. These towns stood in Zeu-gitana.

The most famous river of Africa Propria was the BAGRADA. On the banks of this river Regulus, in the first Punic war, by the help of his battering engines, killed a serpent of a monstrous size, being 120 feet in length.

SECTION X.

ETHIOPIA.

ETHIOPIA was limited on the north by Egypt, on which side it extended to the Lejfer Cataract; on the west by Lybia Interior; on the east by the Red Sea; and on the south by a part of Africa unknown by the Ancients.

This seems to be the same tract which at this day comprehends the kingdoms of Dongola, Sennar, and Alajia, with part of Adel or Zeila.

ETHIOPIA had various names given it by the Ancients. Sometimes they called it Indæ; likewise Atlantia and Ætheria; and, in very early ages, Cæphenia; but the most usual name was Abassæ. In Scripture it is called the Land of Cush.

The principal nations that inhabited this country were, the BLEMMYES, fabled to have had no heads, their mouth and eyes being fixed in the breast. This ridiculous story might have proceeded, perhaps, from their having short necks. The TROGLODITES were a very savage nation, living in caves, and feeding upon serpents, lizards, &c. and having a language of no articulate sounds, but resembling the shrieking of bats. The PYGMIES were a canton of the Troglodites, and were extremely short, black and hairy all over.
6 of

This region did not abound in cities and towns of any considerable note. AUXUME was the metropolis.

Mountains remarkable were, the Garbata, and the Elephas or Phalargis.

The most famous river that watered Ethiopia was the Nile, which the Ancients supposed to have had its rise on some mountains, which they called the mountains of the moon.

The END of the FIRST PART.

A SHORT

A
S H O R T S Y S T E M
O F
C L A S S I C A L G E O G R A P H Y.

P A R T I I.

E

THE VOYAGE
of AENEAS

T. Kitchen Sculpsit

A
S H O R T S Y S T E M
O F
C L A S S I C A L G E O G R A P H Y.

P A R T I I.

The Voyage of ÆNEAS from Troy to Italy.

THE siege of Troy is so very famous for lasting ten years, and also upon account of the great number of heroes who were there, that it is unpardonable for any one to be ignorant of such an event.

The cause of the war between the Greeks and Trojans was this : * Heaven and Earth were at peace, and the Gods and Goddesses enjoyed the most perfect tranquillity : when the goddess DISCORD, who delights in confusion and quarrels, displeased at this universal calm, resolved to excite dissension. In order to effect which, she threw among the goddesses a golden apple, upon which these words were written, " TO THE FAIREST." Immediately each of the goddesses wanted to have the apple, and each said she was the handsomest. The strife was, however, more particularly between JUNO, the wife of Jupiter; VENUS, the goddess of love; and PALLAS, the goddess of arts and sciences. At length they agreed to be judged by a shepherd, named Paris, who fed his flocks upon mount Ida *, and was, however, son to Priam king of Troy. They appeared all three before Paris. Juno offered him the grandeur of the world, if he would decide in her favour; Pallas promised him arts and sciences; but Venus, who tempted him with the most beautiful woman in the universe, prevailed, and he gave her the apple. The joy of Venus may be easily imagined, and the anger of Juno and Pallas. Venus, in order to perform her promise, ordered him to go to Menelaüs in Greece, whose wife, named Helen, would fall in love with him; accordingly he went, and was kindly received by Menelaüs; but soon after Paris ran away with Helen, and carried her off to Troy. Menelaüs, irritated at this injurious breach of hospitality, complained to his brother Agamemnon, king of Mycenæ, who engaged the Greeks to revenge the affront. Embassadors were sent to Troy to demand the restitution of Helen, and in case of a refusal to declare war. Paris denied to restore her; upon which war was proclaimed, and the Grecian princes, under the supreme command of Agamemnon, embark for Troy; but meeting with contrary winds, were detained by them at Aulis †; upon which Calchas, the high priest, declared, that those adverse winds were sent by the goddess Diana, who would continue them till Iphigenia, daughter to Agamemnon, was sacrificed. Agamemnon obeyed, and sent for Iphigenia; but as she was going to be sacrificed, Diana put a hind in her stead, and carried off Iphigenia to Tauros, where she made her one of her priestesses. After this, the winds became more favourable, and they pursued their voyage to Troy, where they landed and began the siege; but the Trojans defended their city so well, that the siege lasted ten years.

* Lord Chesterfield's Letters to his Son, Vol. i. Let. vi. p. 16. Oct. edit.

* IDA, a mountain of Troas in Phrygia, not far from Troy, sacred to Cybele. Hence Ganymede was ravished. It was covered with wood, especially pine-trees, and underneath it Æneas built his sect.

† Aulis, or Aulide, was a city and port of Boeotia, on the gulph of Ægeus.

The Greeks, finding they could not take it by force, had recourse to stratagem. They made a great wooden horse, and inclosed in its body a number of armed men; after which they pretended to retire to their ships, and abandon the siege. The Trojans fell into this snare; and brought the horse into their town, which cost them dear; for, in the middle of the night, the men concealed in it, got out, set fire to the city, opened the gates, and let in the Grecian army, that had returned under the walls of Troy.

The Greeks took the town by storm, and put all the inhabitants to the sword, except a very few, who saved themselves by flight. Among these was ÆNEAS, a Trojan prince, son of Ænchises and of the goddess Venus, who protected him in all the dangers he underwent.

With his aged father on his shoulders*, his young son Ascanius, or Julus, by one hand, the household gods † in the other, and his wife Crœusa following behind him, but who was killed in the flight, he made his escape to Antänder, a town situate near

* For which reason he was surnamed by Virgil, the pious Æneas.

† The household gods were the deities who took the care and guardianship of private families, and were called Penates. They were placed in the utmost recess of the house. Dardanus brought them from Samothracia to Troy, whence, on the destruction of that city, Æneas transports them to Italy. They were reckoned so sacred, that the expression of driving a man from his Penates, was used to signify his being proscribed, or expelled his country.

mount Ida, where he found the remainder of the Trojans, who had escaped the sword of the Grecians. Here they built a fleet of twenty ships, and the spring following they set sail and arrive at Thrace on the other side the Propontis, where they founded the city of Ænēā, called so, in honour of Æneas.

They had not resided here long, before they were warned to depart, by a voice that issued from a snail mount, whither Æneas went to pluck some branches to hide, or overshadow his altars; which informed them, that he who spoke was Polidōre, Priam's young son; whom, being sent thither during the wars, loaded with gold, Polymnēstor, then king of Thrace, had treacherously murdered, and there buried.

After performing Polidōre's funeral obsequies, which he had requested of them, they all agreed to depart; and hoisting sail, they directed their course down the Ægean sea, and arrived at Ortygia or Delos, a small and pleasant island near the islands Mycōne, and Gyaros, where was a famous temple and oracle of *Apollo, whose king and priest happened to be an old acquaintance of Anchises, named Anius†.

Here

* APOLLO was son of Jupiter and Latona, who was delivered of him and Diana in the island of Delos. He is god of the sun, and thence generally is called Phæbus. The poets describe him as drawn in a chariot by four horses full of life and fire, and breathing quick as they run along. His course is said to lie between two fixed points; the first half is all up-hill, and the latter all down-hill. He sets out from the eastern, and drives into the western sea, where he is supposed to pass the nights in the palace of Oceanus. He is imagined daily to drive his chariot over a transparent (or crystal) arch in the heavens, on which appear the tracks of his wheels, as on a common road upon earth. Apollo is also the god of poetry and music; in which character he is represented with a lyre in his hand.

† Anius was of the family of Cadmus, on the side of his mother Rheo, the daughter of Staphilus, who claimed Bacchus for his father. Rheo having had some intrigue, her father exposed her upon the sea in a little ship, in which she arrived at Delos, where she was delivered of Anius, who, by his marriage with Dōripe, had three daughters, extremely frugal, and who laid

Here they asked the oracle what place the gods had appointed for their fixt abode.

By a misinterpretation of the oracle's answer, Anchises supposed it to be the island Crete; accordingly they set sail for that place, where they arrived after a three days voyage, having passed by the islands of Naxos, famous for wines, Paros for marble, the verdant Donyfa, Olëaron, and the Ciclādes. Here they were no sooner landed, than looking upon this country as the place of their abode, they laid the foundations of the city of Pērgamus, drew their fleet on shore, and attempted to settle; but lo! a sudden plague seized the men; blights destroyed their trees, their corn was blasted, and their grass burnt up. In this afflicted condition, they knew not what steps to pursue: Anchises, therefore, as the best method, advised them to dispatch a messenger back again to consult the oracle at Delos, when the night following the household gods gave the true sense of the oracle to Æneas in a vision, advising him to make the best of his way to Italy; adding,

Those are the native realms the Fates assign;
Thence rose the fathers of the Trojan line.
The great Iāsius, sprung from Heaven above,
And ancient Dardanus, deriv'd from Jove;
Rise then, in haste, these joyful tidings bear,
These truths unquestion'd, to thy father's ear.
Be gone—the fair *Aufonian realms explore,
For Jove himself denies the Cretan shore.

Æneas having related this vision to his father and his friends, they all immediately consent to forsake laid up great stores of offerings, which were brought to the temple of Apollo. The Greeks, during the siege of Troy, sent Palamedes to ask provisions from Anius, and obliged him even to give his daughters hostages. These princesses, however, found a way to escape; which gave occasion to say, that Bacchus had transformed them to pigeons.

* The ancient name of Italy was Aufonia, from its most ancient inhabitants, the Aufones. VIRGIL, SERVIVS.

Crete, leaving a small colony behind them. They accordingly spread their sails and put to sea; but as soon as they had lost sight of land, they met with a dreadful storm, which wrap'd them in darkness three days, and, on the fourth, drove them upon the islands Strōphades. These islands lie in the Ionian sea, and were inhabited by the *Harpies. These devouring monsters they were obliged to disperse with their swords, after they had twice seized on their repast; when Celaeno, their chief harpy, prophetically pronounced this tremendous denunciation; that before they should raise the walls of the promised city, they should DEVOUR THE PLATES ON WHICH THEY THEN FED.

The Trojans were so terrified, that they immediately deprecated the gods to avert the horrid fate, and set sail; and after passing within sight of the woody islands, Zacynthus and Cāmē on their left, and craggy Nērīōs and Dulichium on the right, avoiding with the greatest care Ithaca, the rocky island of the dire Ulysses, they cast anchor before the little town of Actium, near the promontory Leucātē, where they pay their vows to Jove, celebrate Trojan games, and, for a monument of their arrival here, Æneas hung up on the sun's temple door, the shield and buckler he had taken from Abas, with this inscription,

* HARPIES, had their name from their rapacity, (ab ἀρπαζω, rapis) They were born of Oceanus and Terra, with the faces of virgins, and bodies of birds; their hands were armed with claws, and their habitation was in the islands.

But, fends to scourge mankind, so fierce, so fell,
Heav'n never summon'd from the depths of hell;
Bloated and gorg'd with prey, with wombs obscene,
Foul paunches, and with ordure still unclean;
A virgin's face, with wings and hooked claws;
Death in their eyes, and famine in their jaws.

ÆN. III. 283. PITT.

—————These

— These arms with blood distain'd,
From conquering Greece the great Æneas gain'd.

Being pleased they had with safety passed through so many Grecian islands.

In the winter following they pursued their voyage, and passed by the lofty island of Phæacia, and coasting along the rocky shores of Epirus, they land at Chaonia, from whence they go immediately to the town of Buthrōtum, situate near Dodōna, then under the government of Hēlēnus, Priam's captive son, who had just succeeded the late king Pyrrhus, and married his widow Andrōmache, who, before, had been the wife of Heētor.

King Hēlēnus and his consort received the Trojan wanderers with the greatest joy, and conducted them into their small city, the walls of which he laid out in the form of old Troy.

Here they refreshed themselves two days; and at their departure, Hēlēnus, who had learnt from Apollo prophecy, informed Æneas of his future adventures, telling him, that he must not expect to reach very soon the destined shore of Italy; for that he'd be obliged to cruize along the Sicilian coasts round to Italy, and afterwards to pass by Circe's island, and at length, before he would be able to raise the foundations of his new city, he must pass the Stygian lake, and visit the infernal regions; promising him, that Apollo would avert the dire prediction of the offended Harpies; and concluded by giving him this most certain omen, when he shall have found the land decreed by fate.

When, lost in contemplation deep, you find
A large white mother of the bristly kind,
With her white brood of thirty young, who drain
Her swelling dugs, where Tyber bathes the plain:
There, there thy town shall rise.—&c.

ÆN. III. 52. PITT.

Hēlēnus

Hélénus afterwards advised them to pass with caution the coast of Italy facing Epirus; for those coasts were possessed by the Grecians, and called by them Græcia Magna. Here dwelt the savage Locrians, and fierce Idmœneus had settled in Salentia, and Philoctetes in Petilia. That the present wind would bear them to the straits of Cape Pélorus, between Italy and Sicily; on the right of which straits stands the dreadful rock Scylla, and on the left the roaring whirlpool Charybdis; to shun which, he advised him to double the whole island, and steer away for the Tiber. He concluded by particularly advising them, wherever they came, to pay their devotions to Juno, and soothe her with repeated oblations; and that after several dangers, they should arrive safe at Cuma in Italy, where, in a dark rocky cave, dwelled the Cumaean Sybil, by whose assistance he should visit and consult his father Æneas, who would then be in the infernal regions. After which Hélénus made the Trojans many rich presents of horses, arms, and provisions; and Andromache presented Æneas with a Phrygian vest.

The Trojans, with warmest thanks, depart, and steer along the coast near the Ceraunæan mountains, where they cast anchor, and again refresh themselves all night on the shore, while Pälınûrus, their chief pilot, observing the watery Ilyâdes, and Plyâdes, the bright constellation of Orion and the two Bears, promised fair weather, orders that next morning they should sail directly across for Italy, where they worshipped the goddess Juno as Hélénus had directed. From thence they sailed cross the Tarentum gulch, and passed within sight of Lacînia, the lofty cliffs of Caulon, and the shipwrecking strands of Scylacæum.

They now arrive in view of the smoaky mountain Ætna in Sicily, and hear the dreadful roar of Scylla and Charybdis, which they avoid by bearing off to sea, and at length, after being tossed about by a terrible storm, they are driven on the Sicilian coasts of the Cyclops, very near burning Ætna, where they lie all the night in the woods.

Early next morning they are greatly surprized at the sudden sight of Āchēmēnīdes, a Grecian, who had by chance been left there some months before by Ulysses. He, with tears, prayed them to take him from those inhuman shores, describing the vast and cruel Cyclops Giant Pōlyphēmus, whom Ulysses had blinded with a firebrand in revenge for devouring some of his men.

Scarce had Āchēmēnīdes done speaking, than the huge ill-shaped monster appeared in sight. The Trojans seized with a sudden terror, ran to their ships, with the unfortunate Grecian Āchēmēnīdes, cut their cables, and in the greatest hurry put to sea. The sightless giant hearing the noise made by their oars, followed them far into the ocean, terribly bellowing when he found he could go no further after them. His dreadful roarings brought from the mountains an hundred more huge frightful Cyclops. The Trojans ply their oars with all their force, and soon reach the small island Ortygia, by the assistance of the north wind, having passed the rocky mouth of the river Pantāgia, the gulph of Mēgāris, and low Tapsus.

From the island Ortygia, they steer by the city Syracuse, and the still river of Elōrus and its fruitful shores, and double the high cliffs of Cape Pachynus, and come in sight of the town Camarīna, the Gelonian Plains, the city of Gela; then of lofty Acrāgas, a town famous for breeding war horses. Afterwards they pass the palmy isle of Selīnus, and, shunning the dangerous rocks near the promontory of Lilybeia, they come to shore at Port Drāpānum; where Æneas's father, Anchises, worn out with endless toils and old age, died, and is much lamented by his pious son and companions. After some stay at this melancholy place with the generous Acestes, they

they again set sail for that part of Italy once called Hesperia, and inhabited by the Oenotrians.

ÆNEAS and his followers had scarce lost sight of Sicily, and got into the Tuscan or Pyrrhanian sea, but revengeful Juno prevails upon Æolus *, god of the winds, to raise a prodigious tempest. The storm sinks one of their ships, and scatters the others; three being driven on the hidden rocks called Aræ, and three more on the Getulian quick-sands, called the greater and the lesser Syrtis. The whole must inevitably have perished, had not Neptune † came timely to their help, who rebuking the winds, and chastizing their master Æolus, for insolently meddling with his dominions, immediately calms the sea, by his trident, and, assisted by Triton ‡ and the sea nymphs, clears the vessels from the rocks and sands. Æneas with his own ship and six more, which the late dreadful storm had spared, sailed for the nearest land, which happened to be a port called Nympharum Antrum, on the coast of Africa or Lybia, in the mean time, Venus complains to Jupiter of her son's misfortunes,

* ÆOLUS was son of Jupiter by Acesta, daughter of Hippota. He presided over the rougher winds, and is described by the poets, of an angry temper, and rough look, sitting in a vast cave, with his subjects fettered or chained down about him. These he was supposed to let out for a storm, and to shut them up again after it.

† NEPTUNE was governor of the inland seas; and is generally described by the poets with a trident in his right-hand. This was his peculiar sceptre, and seems to have been used by him chiefly to rouse up the waves. He holds a dolphin in his left-hand, and rests one of his feet on part of a ship, to shew he presides over the inland seas, more particularly over the Mediterranean, which was the great and almost only scene for navigation among the Greeks and Romans. His aspect is majestic and serene, and is so described by Virgil, even when he is represented as in a passion.

‡ TRITON was the messenger of Neptune, as Mercury was of Jupiter, and Iris of Juno. He is represented by the artists and poets, with his upper part human, and his lower like a fish.

mentioning

mentioning Antenor and his party of Trojans being permitted to escape the Greeks, and quietly to settle at Patavium or Padua, in Italy. Jupiter comforts her, and sends Mercury * to procure Æneas a kind reception at Carthage.

ÆNEAS, next morning, going out to discover the country, meets his mother Venus in the shape of a huntress, who informs him that he was in Lybia, near Carthage, a city which was then building by a Tyrian colony under Queen Dido †, the daughter of Belus II. king of Tyre and Sidon in Phœnicia, who had fled hither by sea, passing the seven mouths of the Nile, in Egypt, down the Carpathian, Lybian, and Mediterranean seas, from her brother Pygmalion, who ascended the throne of Tyre and Sidon, after the death of his father, and who, through covet-

* MERCURY was the son of Jupiter by Maia. His chief character is that of Jupiter's messenger. His distinguishing attributes are his Petäsus, or winged cap: the Talaria or wings for his feet; and the Caduceus, or wand, with two serpents about it. Mercury had also a general power given to him by Jupiter, of conducting souls to their proper place, and of re-conducting them up again upon occasion.

† We are told that Dido bought from the inhabitants of the country, as much ground as a bull's hide would cover; upon which she cut down a hide into many thongs, which encompassed a quantity of ground sufficient to build a citadel upon, which from thence was called Byrsa, that is, a bull's hide; but this is a fable arising from the Greeks pretending to find in their language the etymology of all antiquities, not knowing that Bostra, or Bothrab, in the Phœnician language, imports a citadel. Thus instead of saying that Dido built a citadel, having found this barbarous word in the annals they had read, and not knowing its signification, they translated it by that of Byrsa, which having no sense in this place, they framed the commentary now mentioned. We are further told, that those who dug the foundations of this citadel, found there a horse's head, which they reckoned a presage of its future grandeur; another fable, if we may believe Bochart, founded upon this citadel's being named Cacabé, a word which, in the language of the Phœnicians, signifies a horse. See BOCHART, Chan. l. i. c. 14.—VOSSIUS DE JOL. l. i. c. 3.—and BANIER's Mych. vol. iv. p. 318. Eng.

ousness,

ousness, had murdered her husband Sichæus, that he might possess his immense riches. Venus, moreover, tells him, his ships and friends, which he thought were lost in the late tempest, were all safely arrived at Carthage, whither she conveyed him involved in a cloud, where he, and his companions, received a kind entertainment from the queen, and leave to stay till they had refitted their fleet.

But, unfortunately for her, Dido, by the device of Venus, conceived a passion for ÆNEAS, and prevailed upon him to relate to her, in a particular manner, the history of his adventures since his departure from Troy, it being now seven years since the destruction of that city.

Next morning, the now amorous queen, discovered to her sister Anna, her love for ÆNEAS, and her thoughts of marrying him; to accomplish which purpose, she generously entertained the Trojans, and proposed a hunting match; in the midst of which, Juno, by Venus's consent, raised a storm, which separated the hunters, and drove ÆNEAS and Dido into the same cave, where their marriage was consummated.

They had not lived thus as man and wife long, before the goddess Fama reported it to Iris, king of the Githians, a former lover of Dido's, who appealed to Jupiter as injured; Jupiter moved with his intreaties, dispatched Mercury to ÆNEAS, to order him to sail for Italy. Æneas, secretly, prepares for his voyage; but Dido discovering his design, to put a stop to it, makes use of her own and her sister's intreaties, and discovers all the variety of passions that are incident to a neglected lover; which not prevailing, she, in despair at being abandoned by the man she loved, stabbed herself on a funeral pile, and was burned to death.

Mean time ÆNEAS, and his Trojans, put to sea in the night, but are thrown, by a most dreadful storm, the same evening, on the Sicilian coasts, and are

are obliged once more to call on their old friend Acestes at Drëpānum, who expressed much joy at their return, and joined ÆNEAS in instituting funeral games, in honour of his father Anchises, who was buried there.

While these sports were celebrating, which consisted of rowing-matches, foot-races, shooting with bows, boxing with the cæstus, and the Trojanum agmen, or Alcanius' trained bands, Juno sent *Iris to persuade the Trojan women to burn the ships, who, tired with wandering, at her instigation, set fire to them, which entirely destroyed four, and would have consumed the rest, had not Jupiter, by a miraculous shower, extinguished it. Upon this ÆNEAS, at the advice of one of the generals, and a vision of his father, built a town for the women, old men, and others, who were either unfit for war, or weary of the voyage, and set sail for Italy. Venus procured of Neptune a safe voyage for him, and all his men, excepting only his pilot Palinurus, who, vanquished by Morpheus, the god of sleep, unfortunately fell over-board and was drowned.

They now passed the dangerous rocks of the Syrrens, and landed soon after on the Cumæan coast.

ÆNEAS, immediately on their landing, set out for Cumæ, where he is introduced to the Sybil, in the dark recess of Apollo's temple, by her-priestess Dēiplōbe, with whom he consults concerning the farther progress of his voyage. She informed him, that the Fates had destined him to undergo greater hardships than any he had yet met with; adding, that he would shortly have horrid wars in Italy. As to visiting the infernal re-

* IRIS, or the genius of the rainbow, was the daughter of Thaumas, or Admiration. The poets speak of her as handsome and well-dressed. They make her the messenger of Juno, as Triton was of Neptune, or Mercury of Jupiter. She has wings to shew her dispatch. She is described with a zone, which has all the beautiful colours we so much admire in the rainbow.

gions, she told him, he must first procure a certain golden bough for a passport, and present to Proserpina, queen of hell: and, also, bury his friend, who then lay dead in his fleet.

After ÆNEAS had received this answer from the Sybil, he returned to his ships, and found his trumpeter, Misenus, the son of Æolus, had been drowned by Triton for contending with him*; and, in assisting to get wood for his funeral pile in the neighbouring groves, two of Venus' doves guided ÆNEAS to the golden branch; with which, after paying the last rites to Misenus, and sacrificing, he descended with the Sybil into hell, through the lake Avernus, between his fleet and the city Cumæ. † At the en-

* This accident gave the name of Port Misenus to this place; at this day it is called Monte Miseno.

† At hell's dread mouth a thousand monsters wait;
Grief weeps, and Vengeance bellows in the gate:
Base Want, low Fear, and Famine's lawless rage,
And pale Disease, and slow repining Age;
Fierce, formidable fiends!—the portal keep;
With Pain, Toil, Death's half-brother Sleep.
There Joys embitter'd with Remorse appear;
Daughters of Guilt! here storms destructive War.
Mad Discord there her snaky tresses tore;
Here, stretch'd on iron beds, the Furies roar.
Full in the midst a spreading elm display'd
His aged arms, and cast a mighty shade;
Each trembling leaf with some light vision teems,
And heaves, impregnated with airy dreams.
With double form each Scylla took her place
In hell's dark entrance, with the Centaur's race;
And close by Lerna's hissing monster, stands
Briareus dreadful with a hundred hands.
There stern Geryon rag'd; and, all around,
Fierce Harpies scream'd, and direful Gorgons frown'd.

VIRG. ÆN. vi. 385. PITT.

Milton seems to have carried the description of the monsters in hell farther than any poet whatever.

————— where nature breeds
Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things,
Abominable, inutterable; and worse
Than fables yet have feign'd or fear conceiv'd, Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimeras dire.

Parad. Lost, B. i. 162.

trance

trance of which he beheld, first, those beings which make the real miseries of mankind upon earth; such as War, Discord, Labour, Grief, Cares, Distempers, and Old Age; secondly, the terrors of fancy, and all the most frightful creatures of our imagination, as the GORGON with snaky hair; the double-shaped CENTAUR and SCYLLA; the HARPY with a woman's face, and a lion's talons; the seven-headed HYDRA; GERYON, with his three human heads; BRIAREUS with many hands; and the CIMERA, which breathes forth a flame, and is a compound of three animals. And on the banks of the rivers Acheron and Cocytus, he saw the ghosts of the departed, begging the infernal ferryman, Charon, for a passage over; among whom were Orontes, and Palinurus, who intreat ÆNEAS to cause them to be buried, without which they were not allowed to pass the Stygian lake, 'till they had wandered a hundred years on those dreary banks*.

Charon, seeing a man in armour approach him, at first, proved very furly, saying, in an angry tone, that none but the souls of the dead are to pass over the river; but on sight of the golden bough, shewn him by the Sybil, he is appeased, and at last admitted ÆNEAS with his companion into his boat, and ferries them over to the other shore. No sooner are they passed this fatal river, than they approach the gate to the kingdom of PLUTO, where the Sybil first soothed, and with an enchanted sop, made with honey and poppies, lulled the three-headed dog Cerberus, the porter of hell, to sleep; and, upon opening the gates, found in their several receptacles, first, the ghosts of infants—second, such as were charged with false accusations, and unjustly put to death—third, self-murderers—this was a melancholy region, amidst marshes formed by the overflowing of the river Styx—fourth, the fields of

* This was taught, to promote the funeral rites, which were instituted by the legislator to prevent private murders.

mourning, full of dark groves, for those who died for love; among whom were the unhappy Phædra*, Procris, Eryphyle, Evadne, Laodamia, Pasiphaë, Cænis, and unfortunate Dido, who, looking first upon him with a countenance full of indignation and fury, turns her face aside, fixes her eyes upon the ground, and then leaves him abruptly, without giving him one word of an answer †—fifth, and last, for

* The short history of these unfortunate ladies is as follows: Phædra, the wife of Theseus, being in love with her son-in-law, Hippolitus, and he continuing inflexibly deaf to her incestuous passion, she first accuses him wrongfully to his father of attempting her virtue, and then murders herself out of remorse. Procris, the wife of Cephalus, was extremely jealous of her husband; in hopes of surprizing him, she conceals herself in a thicket, where she imagined he met his mistress: Cephalus hearing her move, and imagining it to be a wild beast, bent his bow, and shot her dead. Eryphyle, the wife of Amphiaraus, discovered to Adrastus the place where her husband had concealed himself, to avoid going to the Theban war. Amphiaraus perishing before Thebes, Alcmeon, his son, revenged his death by slaughtering his mother. Evadne, the wife of Capaneus, so desperately loved her husband, that she cast herself on the funeral pyre, when his body was burning. Laodamia was so fond of her husband Proteusilaus, that after he was killed before the walls of Thebes, she begged of the gods she might see his ghost; which being granted, she perished in his embraces. Pasiphaë was said to be the daughter of the Sun, and wife to Minos king of Crete; she fell desperately in love with a bull. Cænis, the daughter of Elatus, a Lapithan, obtained of her lover, Neptune, as a reward of her prostitution, that she might be transformed into a man, and rendered invulnerable: but the gods being offended at her pride and cruelty, she was destroyed in the war with the Lapithæ, and made a woman again after her death, that for her impieties, she might be deprived of both the favours which Neptune had granted her.

† The silence of Dido is described in a beautiful manner by the poet:

Talibus Æneas ardentem, et torva tuentem
 Lenibat dictis animum, lacrymasque ciebat
 Illa iolo fixos oculos averſa tenebat. . . .
 Tandem proripuit ſete, atque inimica refugit
 In nemus umbriferum. — ÆN. vi. 467.

“ Nought

for departed warriors. ÆNEAS here beheld the Grecian generals and common soldiers who had perished at the siege of Troy, as drawn up in squadrons and terrified at his approach, which renewed in them those impressions of fear they had before received in battle with the Trojans.

Here likewise he viewed the Trojan heroes who had lived in former ages, amidst a visionary scene of chariots and arms, flowery meadows, shining spears, and generous steeds, which were their pleasures while upon earth, and now made up their happiness in Elysium.

Among these shades he found Deiphobus, Priam's son, with his mangled body ; who being married to Helen after Paris, was betrayed by her on the bridal night to Menelaüs, and cut to pieces.

His hands, ears, nostrils, hideous to survey !
The stern insulting foes had lopp'd away.—

After this the road branches into two. That on the left-hand leading to the place destined for the various punishments of the wicked, surrounded with the burning river Phlegethon *, and guarded by “ Nought to these tender words the fair replies,

“ But fixt on earth her unrelenting eyes,
“ The chief still weeping ;—with a sullen mien,
“ In stedfast silence, frown'd th' obdurate queen.
“ Fixt as a rock amidst the roaring main,
“ She hears him sigh, implore, and plead in vain.
“ Then, where the woods their thickest shades display,
“ From his detested sight she shoots away.” PITT.

* Milton has given us a noble description of the rivers of hell.

Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate;
Sad Acheron, of sorrow ; black and deep !
Cocytus, nam'd of lamentation loud
Heard on the rueful stream : fierce Phlegethon,
Whose waves of torrent fire inflame with rage.

Parad. Lost, B. ii. 577.

Typhoea, one of the chiefs of the furies. Within this region was a vast deep pit, in which the tortures were supposed to be performed. The noise of stripes, the clank of chains, and the groans of the tortured, strike the pious ÆNEAS with a kind of horror; and, as they were not permitted to enter INTO TARTARUS, the Sybil pictures to him the punishments of the REBEL GIANTS, who, after their defeat by Jupiter, were cast down into this horrid place, to receive the punishment due to their enormous crimes. SALMONES, for imitating Jove's thunder and lightning. TITYOS, lying on his back, and a vulture plunging his beak into his side, for daring to make love to Latona. Ixion, condemned for impiety and ingratitude, fixed to a wheel, which hurried him round in one perpetual whirl. THESEUS, who attempted to carry off Proserpine for his friend Pirithous, sits for ever upon a stone, whence he cannot possibly stir. The LAPITHÆ, who were placed round a table plentifully set out, with a loose rock hanging over their heads, and the Fury close by to watch and threaten them, the moment they offered to taste any of the tempting things set before them.

Hence they marched towards PLUTO's palace, where they left the golden bough for PROSERPINA, and turned on the right-hand road for Elysium, or the regions of bliss, which was the habitation of those who died for their country; those of pure lives; inventors of arts; and all who have done good to mankind. Here, in the most pleasant situation, they, at length, found Archifes, who instructed ÆNEAS in those sublime subjects, the immortality of the soul, and the happiness and misery of a future state; and shewed him the glorious race of heroes that were to descend from him and his posterity, even to Augustus Cæsar, with their proper characters and actions.

Lastly, Archifes having shewn him the whole of the Elysian fields, and given him proper directions and admonitions respecting his future adventures, led him him and the Sybil through the ivory gate, at the house of Sleep, again to the earth; and ÆNEAS immediately sailed from Cuma, steering by the strand, to Cajēta, so called by him from his old nurse *, whom he there buried, and raised a tomb to her memory.

As soon as the funeral rites were performed, they spread the sails, and depart from Cajeta along the Tyrrhēne sea, and safely passing by the dangerous shelves of the sorceress Circe's enchanted island, infamous for turning Ulysses's men into swine, and other filthy monsters, they arrive next morning at the mouth of the river Tyber, where they go on shore. Nigh which, at Laurentum, reigned then over the Arborigines or Latins, king LATINUS. This LATINUS had an only daughter LAVINIA, who, by the oracle of Faunus, was destined for a foreign husband, who was there to land, and extend their empire over the world. Notwithstanding which, her mother, Queen Amāta, had promised her to Turnus, a neighbouring king of the Rutilians, who inhabited the maritime parts of Campania.

ÆNEAS sent a hundred select youths, loaded with presents, as messengers of peace to king Latinus, to crave a settlement; who kindly received them, and adopted him as his destined son-in-law; permitting him likewise to build a small town, which they called New Troy.

In the mean time, Juno, enraged at the Trojans' success, to destroy the good understanding between them and the Latins, raises the Fury ALECTO from Tartarus; who receiving her orders, instantly flies to the Queen of Latium, and darts one of her serpents into her bosom. This produces in her, first, melancholy and complaints; then rage; and, at last, open acts of violence. From her ALECTO flies to

* Among the Ancients, the nurse was regarded through life as a venerable character.

Turnus, and at midnight appears to him in his sleep, under the form of a priestess of Juno, and tries in a speech to incite him to raise troops against ÆNEAS and his allies. Turnus at first treats her as a false prophetess, at which she is in a rage, and assumes her own shape with all its terrors about it: her face grew larger and larger every instant; her eye-balls became like flames of fire, and her snakes rose about her head in all their fury. She then bids him observe who she was, the dispenser of wars and destruction; darting at the same time her burning torch against his breast. Turnus starts with the fright out of his sleep, calls aloud for arms, excites the people, engages in his quarrel Mēzentius, Cāmilla, Messāpus, and many other neighbouring princes, and breathes nothing but slaughter. From him Aleōto flies, and raises a quarrel between a party of Trojans, and some Latians; and when she saw them sufficiently provoked, she herself sounded the onset to battle; the infernal blast made the woods tremble, and was heard for a vast compass round about. She flies, thence to heaven, tells Juno her commands were obeyed, and wants to do more mischief. Juno says it is enough, and bids her return to Tartarus. On which she flies down, and plunges herself into a horrid sulphureous lake, which leads her directly to her usual abode.

The war being thus begun, both generals made all possible preparations. Turnus erecting his standard at Taurentum, sends ambassadors to Diōmēdes, who, after the siege of Troy, had settled in Italy, at Argyrippa in Apulia. ÆNEAS went in person to beg succours of Evander, who, from Arcadia, had settled upon mount Palatine, and the Tuscans.

Evander received him kindly, furnished him with men, and sent his son Pallas with him.

In the mean time, Venus brings him a suit of armour made by Vulcan, on which was engraven the most memorable actions of his posterity.

Turnus

Turnus taking advantage of ÆNEAS' absence, fired some of his ships (which are transformed into sea-nymphs) and assaulted his camp. The Trojans, being reduced to the utmost distress, sent Nisus and Euryalus, a generous pair of friends, to recall ÆNEAS. Having safely passed through the enemies' trenches in the night, they found them fast asleep after a debauch of wine, and made great slaughter among them; but day approaching, they resolved to retire. Euryalus, like most young warriors, taken with the glittering spoils of the killed and wounded, seized, among other things, Massāpus' crested helmet, and put it upon his own head; which inconsiderate action proved fatal to both him and his friend Nisus; for by it, Volscens, at the head of a party of horse, espied them in their retreat, upon which they fled into a neighbouring wood for safety, where Euryalus lost his way; nor did Nisus miss him till he was got a great way off; but how great was his surprize, when boldly returning in quest of him, he saw him in the hands of his enemy! Resolved to rescue his friend, he threw two lances unobserved, and killed two of their men, which so enraged Volscens, that he immediately plunged his sword into the breast of Euryalus. Nisus bravely revenged his death on Volscens, by mortally wounding him in the mouth, and then, covered with wounds, flung himself on his breathless friend, and slumbered in eternal rest. The Latins fixed both their heads on spears, and set them up in their camps; which the unhappy Trojans beholding from their walls, they greatly lament their death.

The next morning, Turnus rigorously renewed the siege; and for a long time great execution was done on both sides, both by the besieged, and by the besiegers. At length, Turnus broke into the town, and the gates being immediately shut, was surrounded with multitudes of enemies, numbers of whom he killed, but was obliged by little and little to give back towards that part of the town which looked into the river Tyber, and at last, armed as he was, jumped in, swam over, and so escaped to his troops.

While things were thus situated, Jupiter called a council of the gods, and forbad them to engage on either party ; but to leave all to the Fates.

At length ÆNEAS returned, having staid some time in Etruria or Tuscany, with numerous Tuscan and Arcadian auxiliaries, under Tarchon, in thirty ships, and by the way met those sea-nymphs his Trojan ships had been turned into ; who informed him of the dangers his Trojans had been, and still were, in.

Hence, making all the haste he could, next morning, by break of day, coming within sight of the enemy up the river Tyber, he landed his army, and a sharp and bloody battle ensued. Prince Pallas was slain by Turnus, and the impious Mēzentius, with his virtuous son Iaſus, were both slain by ÆNEAS. Turnus being in great danger himself, was freed by Juno, who raised a phantom of Æneas, which he followed as fleeing towards, and into, one of his ships ; whose cables Juno immediately cutting, Turnus was carried safe to Ardea, the palace of his father Daanus.

The next day Æneas erected a trophy of the spoils and arms of Mēzentius, to Mars ; granted a truce for two days to bury the dead, and sent home the body of Pallas with great solemnity. Latīnus, upon being refused assistance from Diomēdes, called a council to propose terms of peace to ÆNEAS. Drances, coming into the measures of the king, bitterly reproached Turnus, as the occasion of the war ; which Turnus as sharply, and courageously, replied to, declaring himself ready to end the war, by single combat with Æneas.

While they were thus disputing, word is brought them, that the Trojan light horse were marching towards

wards Laurentum, and, that ÆNEAS, with the rest of his forces, were to follow by way of the mountains.

Accordingly, Turnus divided his army, placing his horse under the command of Camilla and Messapus, to oppose the Trojan horse, while he, with his infantry, lay in ambush for ÆNEAS in the narrow streights of the mountain. A sharp engagement of the horse followed, and Camilla was slain; but, night coming on, they encamped before Laurentum.

TURNUS having thus lost two battles, resolved to challenge ÆNEAS to a single combat; accordingly, articles were agreed upon, but were broken by the Rutilians, who attacked the Trojans and wounded ÆNEAS, who is obliged to be carried out of the field of battle. On his return, after being miraculously cured by his mother Venus, he called upon Turnus to the duel before agreed upon. In which ÆNEAS getting the better, Turnus begged his life, and the other was almost moved to compassion; till, seeing him have on the famous belt of his friend Pallas, he, in a furious resentment, killed him.

ÆNEAS immediately married Lavinia, and, in honour of her, built the city Lavinium; soon after which, engaging in another war against the Rutuli, he was vanquished in turn, and died in battle, after a reign of three years, and was conveyed to heaven by his mother Venus *.

* His body not being found, it having probably fallen into the river Numicus, near which the battle was fought, it was given out that Venus, having purified him in the water of that river, had promoted him to the rank of the gods. A tomb was erected to him upon the banks of the river, a monument which was still subsisting in the time of Titus Livius, and where sacrifices were offered to him afterwards, under the name of Jupiter Indiges. This hero died at the age of thirty-eight years, and reigned only three.

ASCANIUS, his son, succeeded to the kingdom, and built the famous city Alba, where his descendants reigned three hundred years, in a succession of fifteen princes, till Rhea-Sylvia, a vestal virgin, and niece to Numitor, their last king, being ravished by Mars, the God of war, was, in due time, brought to bed of two boys, Romulus and Remus; who, about seven hundred and fifty years before the birth of Christ, began the foundation of a city, that was one day to give laws to the world. It was called ROME, and its inhabitants ROMANS, after the name of Romulus.

Mænia, Romanosque suo de nomine dicet.
His ego nec metas rerum, nec tempora pono:
Imperium sine fine dedi.—— ÆN. i. 281.

—— Imperial Romulus shall mount the throne;
From his own name, the people Romans call,
And from his father Mars, his rising wall.
No limits have I fix'd, of time or place,
To the vast empire of the godlike race.——
The Thunderer said.—— PITT.

Thus ends the whole of Virgil's inimitable poem called the Æneid.

The Voyage
of Ulysses

T. Kitchen Son, Sculptor

T H E
V O Y A G E
O F
U L Y S S E S
F R O M
T R O Y T O I T H A C A,

ULYSSES was king of a small rocky island in the Ionian sea, called ITHACA, and son to Laertes. His wife's name was *Penelope, with whom he was so much in love, that, unwilling to leave her, he feigned himself mad, in order to be excused going to the siege of Troy; but this device being discovered, he was compelled to embark for Ilion†.

The city, after ten years siege, being taken and destroyed by the Greeks, ULYSSES embarked with twelve ships, and the remains of his troops; but a sudden storm arising, they were driven down north-

* Penelope was the daughter of Icarius, who lived at Athens in the time of Pandion II. She had offers of marriage made her from several princes of Greece; and her father, to avoid quarrels that might have happened, obliged her to be contended for in the games which he made them celebrate; a thing very common in those times. Ulysses was the conqueror, and gained the lady for his prize.
PAUSAN. in Lacon.

† Troy.

ward from Troy to Iſmarus, a town of the Ciconi in Thrace, which they pillaged, and burnt, divided the spoil, put the men to the sword, and attempted to carry away the women; but were prevented by their shrieks, which brought down numberless Ciconi from every part of the continent, who obliged them to give up their prey, and put off immediately to sea, with the loss of six men out of each ship.

The night following, a furious tempest * from the north forced them to put in to the little island of Lemnus †, where they staid two days to refit their battered ships, and then hoisted sail, with a fair wind, down the Ægean sea for Ithaca; but when they arrived off cape Malæa, a promontory of Lacœnica, another dangerous storm from the north, forced them to sail on the south of Cythera, an island dedicated to Venus, opposite Crete; and afterwards drove them far into the Mediterranean sea, where they were tossed up and down for nine days; and on the tenth they were cast on shore at Meninx, the island of the Lotophagi, on the coast of Africa, where they fed on the Lote-tree ‡, brought to them by the hospitable inhabitants.

- Meanwhile, the god, whose hand the thunder forms,
Drives clouds on clouds, and blackens heaven with storms;
Wide o'er the waste the rage of Boreas sweeps,
And night rush'd headlong on the shaded deeps.
Now here, now there, the giddy ships are borne,
And all the rattling shrouds in fragments torn.
We furl'd the sails, we ply'd the lab'ring oar,
Took down our masts, and row'd our ships to shore,—&c.
HOM. Od. l. ix. POPE.

† Called also Diopolis, from its consisting of two towns; in the forum of which mount Athos casts its shadow at the solstice. It is in compass about one hundred and twelve miles, and was sacred to Vulcan. PLINY.

‡ The Lote was a tree whose fruit was of the size of a bean, of a saffron-colour; but often changing colour before its ripened, growing thick on the branches in manner of myrtle-berries, not of tants. The food of the Lote was so luscious as to make strangers forget their native country. Many of ULYSSES' men, therefore, were resolved to stay, which he perceiving, dragged and bound them on board, and immediately set sail for the island Sicily or Trinacria, the country of the monstrous gigantic one-eyed Cyclops; where, landing in the night, at a place called Ulysses' Harbour *, they slept on the sandy shore, and in the morning ascended the mountains, and shot, with their bows and arrows, goats sufficient for each ship's crew; upon which, and the wine they had taken from the Cicons, they feasted all that day, and at sun-set,

“ Slept satiate along the sea-beat shore.”

The day following, ULYSSES, with only his own ship's company, sails along the shore, to view the country and the manners of the inhabitants, while his other companions remained to guard their vessels. When making to the nearest verge of land, they discovered a lonely, high, and spacious grotto, shaded with laurels. They landed cautiously, ULYSSES taking with him on shore, a dozen of his best men, and a goatskin of prodigious strong wine, formerly given him, with other costly presents, by one Maron, priest of Apollo, at Ismarus, to save him, his house, and family, from being plundered among the other Cicons. This wine, one cup of which would bear twenty of water, was designed for a present to the master of this great cave, which happened to be the Cyclops' giant, Polypheme.

They entered cautiously, and finding all vacant within, they made bold to regale upon his sheep, of cherries, as in Italy. The inhabitants were called Lotophagi, from their living on the Lote.

* Now Capo di Marza, also Capo di Castelluccio.

CLUVERIUS.

goats,

goats, milk, &c. which they found in great abundance. But unfortunately for them, in the midst of their feast, lo! Polypheme returned, with a great burden of wood on his back to dress his supper; which he cast down with so hideous a noise at the door, as to fright his new guests into

“ The deep recesses of the den,”

— where they skulked, and held their breath, while the giant entered with his milched cattle, and rolled to the mouth of the cave, a huge massy rock of enormous weight, which would have loaded twenty-two waggons. He then prepares to milk his flock, and makes a large fire, the sudden blaze of which unhappily discovered them. The Cyclops, with a voice like thunder, demanded who they were, and taking them for thieves, instantly snatched two of them, dashed out their brains upon the stony floor, and tearing limb from limb, devoured them; and, filled with human carnage, lay stretched upon the ground, amidst his flock, covering half the cavern with his length.—After that, he served two more so next morning; and in the following evening two more. Hereupon ULYSSES, to escape the like dreadful fate, had the presence of mind, at a distance, to talk of the excellency of his wine, a goblet full of which he gives the giant, telling him, he designed the whole as a present to him, if he'd behave more humanely, and suffer them to depart. The monster heard, took, and poured down his throat the luxurious draught, then cried for more! and more! and, promising his request, asked his name?—My name is Nobody, Sir, replies Ulysses. Well then, Nobody! cries Polypheme, if you will give me a can or two more of your nectar, I will do you such a favour, that you yourself will own shall deserve it. Pray, what may be the favour you'll do me?—Why, Nobody! “ I'll devour you last of all.”

He,

He had no sooner spoke, than, giddy with the fumes of the wine, he thought the cave turned topsy turvy, and at length, unable to stand, fell to the ground,

————— and snoring lay supine ;
His neck obliquely o'er his shoulders hung,
Press'd with the weight of sleep, that tames the strong !
There belch'd the mingled streams of wine and blood,—&c.

Of which ULYSSES taking the advantage, immediately thrust out his eye with a fire-brand, and saved himself and his surviving friends, by escaping under the belly of some of the milch cattle, after the giant had taken away the enormous rock at the cave's mouth, in order to let them out to pasture. Upon this Polypheme roared aloud, and the rocks and dens echoing around his dreadful groans and dismal yell, brought together his brother Cyclops, from their caves about mount Ætna ; who enquired who had hurt him, and were told Nobody. They, taking Polypheme to be mad, left him ; but upon his prayer and complaint to his father Neptune, he promised him to be revenged on ULYSSES. Polypheme afterwards pursued the ships as far as he could into the sea, roaring dreadfully, and throwing at their vessels huge craggy stones and pieces of rock, which had like to have sunk them, before they got to that part of the island, where they had left their companions in the other ships.

They all immediately unbind their ships, and hoist sail for the Eolian Islands *, leaving, by chance, Achæmæniædes, behind them. Here they are hospitably entertained for a month, by Æolus, king of the island, who presented ULYSSES with many rich gifts; and assisted him with a westernly wind, which he wanted, and pent up all the other winds in a sack made of neat's leather, to be let out just as ULYSSES had occasion for them.

* Now called Isole di Lipari, seven islands, situate between Sicily and Italy. The Greeks call them Hephæstiades, and the Romans Vulcaniæ, from their fiery eruptions. They are also called Liparæorum Insulæ, from the principal island Lipara. Dionysius Periegetes calls them Πωρία, because circumnavigable.

They sailed, in this manner, prosperously for nine days, and got within sight of ITHACA; when ULYSSES, tired with being all that time himself at the helm, fell asleep; and his men suspecting the sack to be filled with gold and silver, rashly untied it. Whence, immediately, to their sorrow, rushed out the most furious contrary winds; which drove them off from the shore, and afterwards, with great impetuosity hurried them back again to Æolia, into the very port they set out at. Where Æolus absolutely refused to receive them again, looking upon them as men abandoned by the gods.

Forced thus to put to sea again immediately, they, after six days hard rowing, landed on the continent, near Lestrigenia in Italy, where, out of twelve of their ships, eleven, men and all, are entirely demolished by the bloody-minded Læstrigonian cannibals, who, when they had slain the men, hung them like fish, on files round their girdles.

ULYSSES, horribly frightened hereat, immediately cut with his sword the cables of his own ship from the rocks, and with his crew rowed away to Ææa or Circæum, the habitation of a powerful forcerels, the infamous *Circé, daughter of the Sun, and granddaughter of the Ocean; where, in a safe harbour, they rested themselves two days.

On the third morning, ULYSSES ascended to the top of the mountains to view the country; and in his return killed a huge stag, upon which they regaled all that day, with plenty of wine and venison.

* She dwelt in a peninsula (ἸΑΙΑ ΝΗΣΟΣ, a land island) "Where," says Homer, "was the abode of the Morning, and Out-goings of her parent, the Sun."

The next morning early, he divided his men into two parties of twenty-two men each: Eurylochus commanded one, and himself the other, drawing lots which should guard the ship, and which should go; which last fell to Eurylochus' company: who accordingly went, and discovered Circe's palace, in a woody vale, built with large square stones, and surrounded with wolves, lions, and other wild beasts, who were rendered so tame by her enchantments, as to wag their tails, and fawning, lick their feet like dogs.—The goddess, on their approach, immediately set open her gates, and invited them in. All, except Eurylochus, imprudently accept the invitation, and enter. She gave them at first a kind reception, set victuals before them, and presented them with delicious wine; but secretly mingled a poison with all she gave, which had the power to make them absolutely lose all remembrance of their country. She then gave them a stroke with her wand, and they are all changed into hogs, driven into the stable, and reduced to the life and condition of beasts*.

In the mean time, Eurylochus, suspecting they were either all killed or kept prisoners, returned to ULYSSES, the messenger of woe! who immediately resolved to rescue them, or be revenged; when, in his way, meeting with Mercury, that god prevented him from running the same danger, and gave him the herb called Moly, as a sure preservative against the fatal poison of that goddess; and told him at the same time, that when Circé struck him with her wand, he should draw his sword, and threaten to kill her, till such time as she should restore his friends, make an offer of her love and bed to him, and swear by Styx, the great oath of the gods, to do him no manner of hurt. ULYSSES punctually followed Mercury's advice ; and Circé afterwards restored his companions to him in their former shape.

* We have here a lively image of the sorrowful estate a man is brought into, who gives himself up entirely to pleasure.

After living here a whole year, ULYSSES presses hard to depart, and Circé, out of her great love to him, permitted him, foretold him of his descent into hell, and ordered what sacrifice he should first offer to Pluto, Proserpine, and the prophet Tirēſias. Of the last he was to enquire concerning his affairs. She then told him, he need only hoist sail and sit still, for she would procure Boreas to waft him safe to the end of the ocean, where he would find the grove of Proserpine ; at the end of which was Pluto's palace, hard by where the river Acheron falls into Cocytus, a branch of the Styx, and with it into Pyriphlegethon.

Here she ordered him to make a pit with his sword a cubit wide, and pour round it wine mixed with honey, pure wine, pure water, and over all to throw flour ; for that, says she, is the drink of the dead. Then let out the blood of a ram, and a black ewe, into the pit ; make afterwards your vows to Pluto and Proserpine, and sit down by the pit, sword in hand, letting none of the dead taste the blood till you see blind Tireſias, the Theban Prophet, who will tell you all that's to come ; and afterwards your mother Anticleas' shade, will tell you all that's past at home, since your departure for Troy.

ULYSSES having received this account of the voyage, set sail in the morning, and in the evening of the same day arrived in the place which the goddess had described to him ; where, after having made a plenteous sacrifice, he sat down by the side of the holy blood, which attracted a prodigious assembly of ghosts, of all ages and conditions, that hovered round, and feasted upon the steams of his oblation *.

The

* Homer has given us a most beautiful picture of the spirits in Hades, of their still posture, their motion, their confusion, and the odd noises they utter, in the following lines :

Trembling

The first he knew was the shade of Elpenor, who had broken his neck in a debauch of wine; and begs ULYSSES, that, for the repose of his soul, he would build a monument over him, and perform funeral rites to his memory. ULYSSES, with great sorrow of heart, promises to fulfil his request, and is immediately diverted to an object much more moving than the former. The ghost of his own mother Anticlea, whom he thought still living, appears to him among the multitude of shades that surrounded him, and sits down at a small distance from him, by the lake of blood, without speaking to him, or knowing who he was.

ULYSSES was exceedingly troubled at the sight, and could not forbear weeping as he looked upon her; but seeing Tiresias, does not reveal himself to her, till he had consulted that great prophet, who was the occasion of his descent into the empire of the dead.

Tiresias, having cautioned him to keep himself and his companions free from the guilt of sacrilege, and to pay his devotions to all the gods, promises him a safe return to his kingdom and family, and a happy old age in the enjoyment of them*.

Trembling the spectres glide, and plaintive vent
Thin, hollow screams, along the deep descent.
As in the cavern of some rifted den,
Where flock nocturnal bats, and birds obscene,
Cluster'd they hang, till at some sudden shock
They move, and murmurs run thro' all the rock:
So cowering fled the sable heaps of ghosts,
And such a scream fill'd all the dismal coasts.

Od. 24. POPE.

* Mr. Pope's translation of this concluding part of the speech of Tiresias, is incomparable:

—— Peaceful shalt thou end thy blissful days,
And steal thyself from life, by slow decays:
Unknown to pain, in age resign thy breath,
When late stern Neptune points the shaft with death;
To the dark cave retiring, as to rest,
Thy people blessing, by thy people blest.

G 2

ULYSSES,

ULYSSES, after he had dispatched his business with Tiresias, yielded himself up to the calls of natural affection, and made himself known to his mother.

Her eyes are no sooner opened, but she cries out in tears, Oh! my son! and enquires into the occasion that brought him thither, and the fortune that attended him.

ULYSSES, on the other hand, desires to know what the sickness was that had sent her into those regions, and the condition in which she had left his father, his son, and more particularly his wife.

She tells him, they were all three inconsolable for his absence; "as for myself," says she, "that was the sickness of which I died. My impatience for your return, my anxiety for your welfare, and my fondness for my dear ULYSSES, were the only distempers that preyed upon my life, and separated my soul from my body."

ULYSSES was melted with these expressions of tenderness, and thrice endeavoured to catch the apparition in his arms, that he might hold his mother to his bosom, and weep over her.

The mother seems to withdraw from her son's embraces; and in excuse, describes the notions the Heathens at that time had of an unbodied soul. The soul, says she, is composed neither of bones, flesh, nor sinews; but leaves behind her all those incumbrances of mortality, to be consumed on the funeral pile. As soon as she has thus cast her burden, she makes her escape, and flies away from it like a dream.

This melancholy conversation is succeeded by the shades of the finest women that had ever lived upon the earth, and, who had either been the daughters of kings, the mistresses of gods, or mothers of heroes; such as, Antiope, Alcmena, Leda, Ariadne, Iphimedia, Eriphyle, and several others.

The circle of beauties disappeared, and was followed by the shades of several Grecian heroes, who had been engaged with ULYSSES in the siege of Troy. The first that approached was Agamemnon, their

their generalissimo, who, at the appearance of his old friend, wept very bitterly; and, without saying any thing to him, endeavoured to grasp him by the hand. ULYSSES, who was much moved at the sight, poured out a flood of tears, and asked him the occasion of his death, which Agamemnon related to him in all its tragical circumstances; how he was murdered at a banquet, by the contrivance of his own wife, in confederacy with her adulterer. The next that presented themselves were Achilles with Patroclus and Antilochus. Achilles enquires after the welfare of his father and son. ULYSSES informs him of the great honour and rewards his son had purchased before Troy, and of his return from it without a wound. The shade of Achilles was so pleased with this account of his son, that he enquired no further; but stalked away with more than ordinary majesty over the green meadow that lay before him. Ajax follows, and refuses to speak to ULYSSES, who had won the armour of Achilles from him, and by that means occasioned his death. ULYSSES, in a speech, attempts to soften his rage; but Ajax, without making any reply, turned his back upon him, and retired into a crowd of ghosts.

ULYSSES, after these visions, beheld Tityus, Tantalus, *Sisyphus, and Hercules, who lay in tortures, for the crimes they had committed upon the earth; and has a great curiosity to see the heroes that lived in the ages before him; but the ghosts began to gather about

* Καὶ μὲν Σίσυφον εἰσεῖδον, κρατέρ', ἄλγέ' ἔχοντα,
 Λααν βαζάζοντα πελώριον ἀμφοτέρησιν.
 Ἡ τοὶ δ' μὲν οὐκ ἐπιπόμενοι χερσίν τε ποσὶν τε
 Λᾶαν ἄνω ὤθεσκε ποτὶ λόφον· ἀλλ' ὅτε μέλλοι
 Ἄκρον ὑπερβαλέειν, τότε ἀποσφρέψασκε κραταῖς
 Αὔτις, ἔπειτα πέδον δὲ κυλίνδῃο λᾶας ἀναιδής.
 Αὐτὰρ ὅγ' ἄψ' ὤσασκε, τίλαινόμενοι κατα δ' ἰδρῶς Ἑρρίεν ἐν μιλίων, κοίτη δ' ἐν κρατὺς ὀρέγρει. Od. xi. v. 552.

about him in such prodigious multitudes, and such a confusion of voices, that his heart trembled, as he saw himself amidst so great a scene of horrors, and he was afraid lest some hideous spectre should appear to him, that might terrify him to distraction; he, therefore, withdrew in time.

In his return back, he called again at Ææa, the island of Circé, and is received by her with great kindness, and once more warned of the future dangers and accidents, which he should strive to avoid: such as the sweet enchanting songs of the Syrens, as he passed by their island; which he had much ado to escape, by being bound to the mast of his ship, and stopping his ears, and the ears of all his companions, with wax*. Then the dangerous rocks of These verses, in a most surprizing manner, express the taking of great pains, and laborious exercise. They are thus translated by Mr. Pope.

“ I turn’d my eye, and as I turn’d, survey’d
 “ A mournful vision!—the Syzyphian shade;
 “ With many a weary step, and many a groan,
 “ Up the high hill he heaves a huge round stone;
 “ The huge round stone, resulting with a bound,
 “ Thunders impetuous down, and smokes along the ground;
 “ Again the restless orb his toil renews,
 “ Dunt mounts in clouds, and sweat descends in dews.”

* Homer, by this ingenious fable, has designed to let us know, that there are pleasures, which seem very innocent, that are yet very dangerous. The Syrens were a kind of sea-nymphs, who, by the sweetness of their voices, and the harmony of their songs, drew all such as had the curiosity to hear them, into a precipice. For which reason, the Poet Martial calls them, very elegantly, “ the pleasing pain, the cruel joy, and “ the agreeable destruction of travellers.”

Sirenas, hilarem navigantium pœnam,
 Blandasque mortes, gaudiumque crudele,
 Quas nemo quondam deserebat auditas,
 Fallax Ulysses dicitur reliquisse.—

See ROLLIN's Belles Lettres, vol. iv. p. 332.

Scylla

Scylla and Charybdis ; the first of which swallowed six of his men. He afterwards landed in Trinacria, or Sicily ; which island, with its flocks and herds, were consecrated to Apollo or the Sun, which Ulysses was forewarned not to meddle with. But, while he was asleep, his companions, being reduced to extreme hunger, by want of provision, killed some of those oxen. Which sacrilege was revenged on the seventh day ;

“ When lo ! the wild winds whistle o’er the main.”

The heavens are blackened with storms ; and his only remaining ship is dashed to pieces by a thunder-bolt from Jupiter, and all his crew perish, himself being obliged to swim on the broken mast, and rudder tied to it, till, after having been tossed and re-tossed nine days upon the waves, he got to the island Ægygia, under the foot of Italy.

In this island dwelt the goddess CALYPSO, the daughter of Oceanus and ancient Tethys, who kindly received, and hospitably entertained ULYSSES for seven years, promising to make him immortal, if he would consent to stay with her always. But, in a council of the gods, Minerva, ever careful of him, prevails upon Jupiter to command CALYPSO to send away ULYSSES ; to which, with much difficulty, she consented, and he embarked on a raft of trees tied together ; but being unfortunately overtaken by revengeful Neptune with a terrible tempest, his raft is dashed to pieces, and himself driven naked upon the coast of the island Corcyra, or Phæcia.

Here, quite spent with fatigue, ULYSSES slept on a heap of dry leaves all that night : when early the next morning, the princess Nausicaa, the daughter of Alcinous, king of the Phæacians, who came to wash her garments in the river *, found him ; and, after cloathing ing him, brought him to her father, to whom he related all his adventures; and from him and his nobles, receives presents of different kinds, and of immense value, and a safe conveyance, while he's asleep, to ITHACA; where Minerva appears to him in the shape of a shepherd, and informs him where he is, while vindictive Neptune maliciously turns the Phæacian ship, that conveyed him, into a rock.

* Kings and princes, in Homer, have nothing of the luxury and pomp which have since infected the courts of great men ;

MINERVA afterwards assisted him to hide his treasures, instructed him what to do, and, to conceal his return, and disguise his person the more effectually, she transformed him into the figure of an old beggar: under which habit, going to his hog-herd, Eumæus, he informed himself, undiscovered, how affairs then went with Penelope's suitors. Eumæus afterwards conducts him to his palace, where he is known by his old dog, Argos, after an absence of twenty years, and is entertained by Penelope very courteously, without knowing him, who commands that his feet might be washed, and that he should have a bed; in doing which, his old maid servant or nurse, Euryclæa, found out he was ULYSSES, by a scar on his leg, which he formerly received in hunting the wild boar on Parnassus.

In the mean time, he consults with Minerva about the destruction of the woers, and makes himself known to his son Telemachus, Eumæus, and his neat-herd, Philætiüs, while the suitors are striving to bend ULYSSES' bow: for Penelope had, from time to time, for almost twenty years, put off her suitors till such time as she should have finished a piece of weaving, of which she undid every night all she had wrought in the day; at last she brings out her husband ULYSSES' bow, promising to marry the person who had strength and skill enough to bend it, and shoot through the ringlets; which all of them endeavoured to do, but in vain. ULYSSES then desires leave to try his strength, which, though refused with indignation by the suitors, Penelope and Telemachus cause it to be delivered to his hands; he immediately bent it, and shoots through all the rings; Jupiter, at the same instant, thundered from heaven; ULYSSES accepted the omen, and gave a sign to Telemachus, who stood ready armed at his side.

Simplicity and modesty were the happy character of those early ages. A noble and vigorous education had inured them to labour, and to such offices as we think low and mean, but were agreeable to what they were at first designed for, to their condition and capacities, and more proper to preserve their virtue, than the vain amusements and diversions which have succeeded in their stead. They went to draw water from the spring in person. Nausicaæ, the daughter of the Phæacian king, goes to wash her garment in the river with her women: and the queen, her mother, was got up to her spinning by break of day, in the chimney-corner.

ULYSSES immediately began the slaughter of the suitors by the death of Antinoüs. Then declared himself, and, with the assistance of Telemachus, Eumæus, and Philætiüs, he slew the rest of the suitors, and afterwards ordered the unfaithful servants to be executed; especially, out of Penelope's fifty maids, twelve, who had behaved imprudently, were hanged. The rest acknowledged their master with all demonstrations of joy.

ULYSSES being restored to the beauty of his youth by Minerva, is then introduced to Penelope; and they recount to each other all that had passed during their long separation.

The next morning, ULYSSES, arming himself and his friends, went from the city, in the habit of a stranger, to visit his father Laertes, whom he found sorrowing for his absence, and busying himself in his garden, to divert the melancholy of his thoughts. The hero does not discover himself immediately; but only just mentions to him, that he had seen ULYSSES in his travels; and that when they parted, he flattered himself with hopes of seeing him again; but now, he found, he must despair of that happiness.

piners. This was too much for the good old Laertes to bear : he is overcome with sorrow ; when Ulysses —— ran, and seiz'd him with a strict embrace,

With thousand kisses wander'd o'er his face,
I, I am he ; oh father, rise ! behold,
Thy son ! —————

Laertes at first expresses some doubts ; but, on seeing the scar made by the tusk of a wild boar, is satisfied, and, with Dolus and his six sons, acknowledge the king.

Cyllenius * (Mercury) in the mean time, conveys with his golden wand the souls of the suitors to the infernal shades, and their bodies are buried by the Ithacensians ; who, headed by Euphites, the father of Antinoüs, rebel, and a dreadful battle ensues, in which Euphites is slain by old Laertes : when the goddess Minerva, descending from above, commands them to desist, and concludes a lasting peace between ULYSSES and his subjects.

Thus ends that very fine poem, written by Homer in Greek, and called the Odyssæy.

* Mercury is so called as being the son of Jupiter and Maia, and born on the mountain Cyllene in Arcadia.

T H E
 T R A V E L S A N D V O Y A G E S
 O F
 S A I N T P A U L.

S AINT PAUL was a native of Tarsus, the metropolis of Cilicia, a city famous for riches and learning, and where the inhabitants enjoyed the liberties of Roman citizens; which advantage, St. Paul asserted afterwards before Festus, as the privilege of his birth-right. He was born about two years before CHRIST, and belonged to the tribe of Benjamin, the youngest son of Jacob.

The first action we find him engaged in, was the disputation he had with the martyr Stephen, whose death he consented to, keeping the raiment of them that slew him. Our Apostle afterwards became a great enemy to the Christian faith, and prosecuted all its professors with the utmost fury at Jerusalem. Having thus made great havock of the church in that city, he procured a commission of the high-priest and council, to seize, bind, and imprison all Christians at Damascus, and to bring them to Jerusalem.

But in the midst of his bloody career, he was miraculously converted by a voice from heaven, and three days after, was baptized by Ananias, a devout man, and one of the seventy disciples, at Damascus, where he preached that gospel which he had so lately sought to destroy, to the very great astonishment of those who knew on what occasion he was sent thither.

ST. PAUL did not stay long at Damascus after his conversion; but retired into Arabia Petræa, and, having preached some time there, returned again to Damascus, where he staid three years.

The malice of the Jews, being incensed for having lost so considerable a champion, pursued him close. They contrived all possible means to dispatch him; and, after many other stratagems in vain, made their request to the governor, under Aretas, king of Arabia Petræa, (into whose hands, by the defeat of Herod's army, that city had now fallen) that he would gratify them in his destruction. The gates were day and night most strictly guarded, to prevent his escape; but the disciples let him down over the city-wall in a basket.

He now went up to Jerusalem; where he met with Peter, and James the Lord's brother, and abode with them fifteen days, speaking boldly in the name of Jesus, and disputing with the Greeks, who also had consulted how they might kill him; but PAUL praying in the temple, had a trance, in which the Lord bad him depart from Jerusalem, since they'd not receive his testimony; adding, that he would send him to the Gentiles.

PAUL, therefore, left Jerusalem, and, coming to Cesarea Philippi, he set sail for his native city of Tarsus; from whence, in company with Barnabas, he went to Antioch, the capital of Pisidia, where he continued a whole year, converting multitudes to the faith. Here it was that the disciples first obtained that honourable title of Christians.

PAUL

PAUL and Barnabas afterwards set forward in their preaching the gospel, planting the Christian faith in Seleucia, Cyprus, and other places. At Paphos, (a city in Cyprus) they converted Sergius Paulus, the governor of the island; where Bar Jesus, a Jewish impostor, who styled himself Elymas, withstanding them, was, at Paul's request, struck blind.

From Cyprus, ST. PAUL repaired to Perga in Pamphilia, and, taking Titus with him, travelled to Antioch, where the Gentiles believe, but the Jews gainsay. Whereupon they turned to the Gentiles, and came to Iconium, the metropolis of Lycania, a province of Lesser Asia; and after some stay here, the malice of the Jews pursuing them hither also, caused them to flee to Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lyconia. At Lystra, upon PAUL's healing a cripple, the mob called out, the gods are come down; and bringing sacrifices, they would needs have honoured them therewith, calling BARNABAS Jupiter, and PAUL Mercury. But they are soon exasperated against them by the perverse spite of the Jews from Antioch, and stone Paul, dragging him out of their city for dead; who, coming again to himself, departed next day with Barnabas to Derbe, where he did not continue long, but returned into Syria and Cilicia.

PAUL afterwards coming to Derbe, took Timothy, a young man just converted, with him; and, in a vision, is directed to go into Macedonia. Passing, therefore, through Phrygia, he took ship, and came to Samothracia, an island in the Ægean Sea, not far from Thrace; and the next day to Neapolis, a port of Macedonia. Leaving Neapolis, he repaired to Philippi, the metropolis of that part of Macedonia, and a Roman colony, where he staid some days, and converted Lydia, and cast out of a maid-servant a spirit of divination, which had brought her master considerable gain.

Upon this the master complained to the magistrates, who severely scourged and imprisoned them.

But

But their vain malice was presently defeated ; for, at midnight, PAUL and Silas praying and singing psalms, the doors of the prison flew open, and their bonds were unloosed, attended by an earthquake, that shook the foundations of the prison. This convulsion of nature roused the keeper, who, believing his prisoners were escaped, at first in despair was going to kill himself ; but was afterwards converted, and baptized, with all his family ; and the next day the magistrates themselves came and prayed them to depart the city.

Hence ST. PAUL continued his journey towards the west, till they came to Thessalonica, about an hundred and twenty miles from Philippi ; where he disputed in the synagogues of the Jews, mightily convincing them of the truth of his doctrine. Here he is again persecuted, and obliged to fly, by night, to Beræa, a city about fifty miles south of Thessalonica, and soon after he arrived at Athens ; where, endeavouring to convince the philosophers of their errors and delusions, and declaring unto them, that Ἄγνωτος Θεός, unknown God, whom they had, under false notions, blindly worshipped, he converted Dionysius, the Areopagite, and some others : and from thence passed to Corinth, a very populous place, and famous for its trade. Here he found Aquila, and Priscilla his wife, lately come from Italy, having been banished Rome by the decree of the emperor Claudius against all Jews ; and, they being of the same trade he himself had learned in his youth, that of a tent-maker, he wrought with them, that he might not be troublesome to the new converts.

PAUL, after a stay of a year and six months, departed in a ship from Corinth, and passed to Ephesus, thence to set out by sea towards Jerusalem, that he might be there at the feast of the passover.

Landing, therefore, at Cesarea, he went first to Jerusalem, and then down to Antioch, he came into the regions of Galatia and Phrygia, confirming the disciples in all those places. He then returned to Ephesus, and disputed daily in the school of Tyrannus, and continued preaching thereabouts, till Demetrius, a silversmith at Ephesus, raised a mob upon PAUL, who were appeased by the town-clerk: but PAUL departed into Macedonia, to gather a contribution for the relief of the saints at Jerusalem. In his return out of Greece, he sails down the Ægean Sea from Philippi to Troas in five days, and then coasted down to Affos; and from thence to Mitylene. Next day they came over-against the isle of Cbios, and arrived the next at Samos; and the day after came to Miletus. Setting sail from Miletus, they came in a straight course to the small island of Coos, and the day following to the island of Rhodes, and from thence to Patara, the metropolis of Lycia, where they went on board another vessel bound for Tyre in Phœnicia. Here they staid seven days; when, sailing from Tyre, they staid a day at Ptolemais, and the next landed at Cesarea; from whence, in carriages, they went to Jerusalem.
the

Soon after PAUL was come to Jerusalem, he was apprehended in the temple, and secured in the castle; where, claiming the privilege of a Roman, he escaped scourging: and afterwards pleaded his cause before Ananias the high-priest.

Next day, being again brought before the council of the Jews, when Claudius Lysias, the Roman chief captain there, understood that above forty Jews had bound themselves under a curse, neither to eat nor drink till they had killed PAUL, he sent him under a guard of two centurions, with two hundred foot soldiers, seventy horse, and two hundred spearmen, immediately away in the night, to Felix, governor of the province, before whom he was accused by Tertullius the orator; and Felix, soon after going out of his office, to gratify the Jews left PAUL in prison.

Felix

Felix being succeeded in the government by Portius Festus, the Jews came to Cesarea to renew their complaints against PAUL, who answered for himself; but found it necessary to appeal to Cæsar *.

King AGRIPPA being then come to Cesarea, Festus opened the whole matter to him; and PAUL made his defence in his presence; who thereby is almost persuaded to be a Christian, and the whole company pronounce him innocent; Agrippa declaring to Festus, that he saw no reasonable objection to his release, except the impracticability of it after an appeal.

* This was a privilege belonging to Roman subjects; that, upon any suspicion of foul dealing, they had liberty to remove a cause out of an inferior court, and refer it to the judgment of the emperor in person.

T H E
V O Y A G E
O F
S A I N T P A U L
F R O M
C E S A R E A T O R O M E.

IT being thus finally determined that PAUL should be sent to Rome, he was, with several other prisoners of consequence, committed to the care of Julius, commander of a company belonging to Cæsar's own legion.

In September 56 or 57, he embarked on board a ship of Adramyttium *, and sailed to Sidon. After a short stay, they sailed from thence for Cyprus, and arrived at a place near Myra, a city in Lycia; where the centurion, finding a ship of Alexandria bound for Italy, put into it the prisoners.

In which ship, being a slow sailer, and the winds contrary, they were many days in getting against Cnidus. From whence, sailing past the isle of Rhodes, under the island of Crete, over-against the promontory of Salmone, which they passed with difficulty, they came to a place called the Fair Havens, nigh to the city Lasea in Crete; where, when much time

* Now L'Andramiti, or Endramiti, a port near Troas.

H

was

was spent, the winter being come in, and sailing dangerous, PAUL, fearing not only the loss of the ship and lading, but also of their lives, admonished them to stay. But the master of the ship being of a contrary opinion, and that haven not commodious enough to winter in, the centurion and the rest advised them to depart thence, to get, if possible, as far as Pbenice, another haven of Crete, on the south-west and north-west.

Having, therefore, a gentle south-west wind, hoping it would do, they loosed from thence, and coasted by Crete. But not long after, rose a direct contrary wind, and a most prodigious tempest, which tossed them up and down in the Mediterranean for fourteen days and nights; when the mariners imagining they drew near some land, they threw out their plumb-line to sound, and found it twenty fathoms; going a little further, they found it but fifteen fathoms. Then, fearing they should fall on some rocks, they cast out four anchors abaft, and let down the boat, under the pretence of casting more anchors out of the fore-castle; but their design was to row off in the boat: which PAUL perceiving, said to the centurion and soldiers, If the sailors go out of the ship, we are all lost. On which the soldiers immediately cut the ropes, and set the boat adrift. At break of day PAUL, assuring them they would all save their lives, eat himself, and persuaded them, in all two hundred and seventy-six souls, to eat likewise, having now fasted fourteen days.

They then lightened the ship by casting the wheat, &c. into the sea. But when it was day-light, they knew not the land; however, they soon took up their anchors, loosed the rudder-bands, hoisted their main-sail to the wind, and made toward shore; when, falling into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship aground; and the fore-castle stuck fast, but the hinder part was beat to pieces by the waves. The soldiers would have killed their prisoners, lest any should make their escape; but the centurion, willing to save PAUL, ordered all that could swim to make the best of their way; and the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship, so that all got safe to land, which they found to be the island of Malta or Melita.

Here PAUL and all the company, after their shipwreck, were hospitably entertained by the Barbarians, who stood amazed to see PAUL shake a venomous viper off his hand unhurt. He then cured the governor's father of a fever and bloody-flux, and many other diseases in the island.

After receiving great honours and favours for three months, they set sail again in the Castor and Pollux of Alexandria, and landing at Syracuse in Sicily, they tarried there three days. And from thence sailed to Rhegium, at the toe of Italy, where waiting a day for a south-wind, they came the next day to Puteoli: where all landing, and PAUL meeting with his friends, they were desired to tarry with them seven days, and then went by land towards Rome. On the road, at Appii-Forum and Three Taverns, (two towns, the former fifty miles, and the latter thirty from Rome) more of PAUL's friends met them, and conducted them to the city; where the centurion delivered the other prisoners to the captain of the guard; but PAUL was a prisoner at large, in his own hired house, and preached there two years.

Being, at the end of two years, set at liberty, he went to preach at Crete: and at length suffered martyrdom, with St. Peter, at the Agnæ Salvæ, three miles from Rome, towards the latter end of NERO's reign, about the year of Christ 67. His body was buried in the Via Ostiensis near Rome. A stately church was built to the honour of his memory by Constantine the Great, which was afterwards enlarged and beautified by other of the succeeding Christian emperors:

Preparing for the Press,
BY THE AUTHOR OF THE FOREGOING SHEETS,
A VIEW OF THE HEAVENS, AS KNOWN TO THE
A N C I E N T S:
BEING A SHORT BUT COMPREHENSIVE
S Y S T E M
OF CLASSICAL ASTRONOMY.